Lawrence County furnished Louisville, with the Hogs last year that took first premium. This should be encouraging to Hog raisers in this county. There is money in raising hogs, if they are pushed and disposed of, at year-olds but there is no money in feeding hogs for two or three years.

P. V. Channell special agent of the Equitable Life Insurance Co. of N. Y. was in town this week. Mr. Channell says that all men should take out a policy, even from a business standpoint. The only benefit we can see in the life insurance is that of a man conferring a double barrel favor at the close of his earthly career, first, by conferring a favor on those left behind by his departure, second by turning his insurance over to his relatives.

Tuesday, Sept. 19th., the remains of Ex-President Polk, and wife, who shared his honored career, were removed from their former resting place at the Polk Place, and reinterred on a well shaded knoll on the Capitol grounds.

Rev. Jerrc Witherspoon, in an appropriate oration at the grave, closed with the following beautiful and touching words, "here rest ye honored dead of Tennessee; here sweet be your rest, till He bids thee arise, to hail Him in triumph descending the skies"

The Baptist Association, held at Sweet Gum Flat Ala. Sunday Sept. 17th, was largely attended, and a full delegation being present, the able divines delivered eloquent addresses to the large concourse of people assembled for the occasion.

In mentioning this grand affair, we can not forget the hospitable home of W. W. Belew, where we stopped and enjoyed a delicious repast, prepared by his estimable lady.

Lawrenceburg Institute Notes.

SEVEN.

ED. DEMOCRAT:

It becomes our sad, sad duty, to announce the death of Miss Emma Locke. She was taken sick on Sunday morning, September 21st, with meningitis. No one knows what she suffered, nor how hard it was for loving ones to stand by and see her suffering, and know they were powerless to give her ease, except those that have experienced it. She was attended by two of the best physicians in the state, and surrounded by a host of sorrowing relatives and friends, and had every attention. But it pleased our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, to call her home. So on Saturday night September 16th., she calmly fell asleep. "Oh! blessed sleep from which none ever wake to weep." And I don't have a doubt in my mind but that she went to rest. Oh! what a comfort this ought to be to those left behind, that while we suffer afflictions and heart aches here, she is done with the trials and troubles of this cold and unfriendly world; but it is hard to look at things in this light. We miss her so much, we miss her everywhere. Too much could scarcely be said in praise of Emma. She was a loving and obedient daughter and sister, a kind and affectionate friend, ever ready to help the afflicted and distressed. She was all that goes to make a pure and upright woman, so gentle, so kind and cheerful, always striving to help others. We speak as one who knows, for we were with her a great deal, and feel like we had lost one of our best friends. Oh! how can we write the words, Emma is dead? Some times our anguish is so great, we are made to cry out, why is it thus? But it is not for us to question why he does these things, for he does all things well, though we can not always see it that way, but some day if we are so fortunate as to get to that better land, we will see and know why these things were. We have sometimes feared that Emma was loved too well for this world; but to know her was to love her, she was such a sweet turned girl, she made friends every where she went. She leaves a father, mother, one sister, five brothers, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss, but they mourn not as those who have no hope, for we feel that our loss was her eternal gain. The family have our deep sympathy, and we think we know just how they feel, for we too have loved ones over the "dark river," and have felt the pain of giving up those we loved best to that hey hand "death." Oh! if we could only say, as did the Apostle of old, "The Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord." But is hard, Oh! so hard to be submissive, and say, "Thy will, Oh! Lord, and not mine be done."

Into each life some rain must fall, Some days must be dark and dreary, Ah! how true those words that call; "Be brave," though the heart grows weary.

"Be brave," though the rain drops as they fall, Bring to the aching heart no balm, And lightning flashes, and thunder's roll; There will come in time a calm.

A voice will be heard saying, "Peace be still."

Lo! the rain drops cease to fall, And meekly we bow to the "Fathers will;"

And drink of the cup that has lost its gall.

Bear ore my soul a little while' The cross your Father has given, Bear ore with patience and loving smile;

And soon you shall rest with your Father in Heaven.

From one who loved her.
