“He That Keepeth the Law.”

From Address delivered before the American Bar Association, by Jas. M. Beck, Solicitor General of the United States.
The greatest service that the Bench and Bar can render in combating the evils of a mechanical age is to defend and preserve in its full integrity the Constitution of our fathers.

That Constitution was their “vision.” And when did a nobler one ever inspire men in the political annals of mankind? Without that vision to restrain each succeeding generation of Americans from the temptations of political power, the American Commonwealth, with its great heterogeneous democracy, might conceivably perish.

LOUISVILLE GREETES YOU!

THE progress and prosperity of the great agricultural empire of Western Kentucky and West Tennessee is well known to Louisville business men. Aside from the pleasant trade relations which they have long enjoyed with this territory, they have viewed your achievements with pride. You and they are descended from mutual stock, and with the Southerner's pride in kinship, they have long regarded you as their own people. So Louisville Heads of Houses are looking forward with enthusiasm to the visit which they are soon to make you. They want to talk over with you problems of agricultural and commercial development, good roads, education, rail and water transportation, marketing and other matters in which Kentuckians and Tennesseans are mutually interested. Their special train carrying the Board of Trade band, 125 executives of commercial and industrial establishments, railroad presidents, newspapermen and others will arrive in—
