

POPULAR SUBSCRIPTIONS TO START NEXT WEEK; TO RAISE $2000 THIS WAY.

"Have you paid your poll? I have." This slogan will greet everyone next week from buttons to be worn on the lapel of the El Paso business men's coats.

The chamber of commerce budget fund will be closed next Saturday with a whirlwind, popular campaign for $1 subscriptions to the chamber of commerce fund. It is estimated that the chamber of commerce budget fund, which has been working out a plan for having every business and professional man in El Paso give $1 to a popular fund to help the chamber of commerce along.

The plan to start the campaign Wednesday noon and to continue it through the remainder of the week. His scheme is to have clerks in banks and stores, real estate offices, young lawyers, doctors and dentists. In this way he hopes to get many who have not given to the chamber of commerce and to swell the total of the budget fund by $2000 in this way. Before this popular campaign is started it is expected to raise $40,000 for the budget fund and then the $2000 to make the grand total of $42,000, which was fixed for the 1916 budget.

Everyone to Give. Those who have not subscribed to the budget fund will not be prohibited from giving to the popular subscription fund for each $1 given to the popular fund the giver will be presented with a badge of honor showing that the wearer has joined the "Greater El Paso" movement. The popular subscription campaign will be started at the Rotary-Adolph luncheon and will continue until Saturday evening. The directors of the chamber of commerce and a special committee working with Mr. Little will arrange for this campaign and it is expected to have everyone wearing the budget fund badge by the end of next week.

40,000 Fund Now. A meeting of the budget committee was held Tuesday afternoon in the office of H. L. Farrar at the Security bank and plans made for completing the canvass of business houses and other budget prospects during the first part of the week, the canvass starting Monday.

The records of the present canvass show that only one-half of the budget subscribers to the 1916 fund have given this year, although a number of new subscribers have been added. There were 728 subscribers last year and, of this number, only 368 have given this year. The total is now $40,000.

"BRINGING UP FATHER" TO BE SEEN HERE IN THE FLESH

As a rule plays written for the purpose of making folks laugh, can't boast of continuity of plot or story. However, in "Bringing Up Father," the latest Gus Hill offering which comes to the Texas Grand commencing Feb. 19, for a stay of two days, there is said to be no trouble in following a tale strictly human and engaging from every point of view. The characters are flesh and blood creations and this piece in its entirety even from a literary angle, is the best production Mr. Hill has fostered during his long career as a producer of stage entertainment. It is claimed, the piece, which was suggested by the popular cartoons of George McManus daily features of The El Paso Herald, is in three acts. Action is ripe from curtain to curtain and interest is never admitted to lag. During the development of the plot at least a dozen song bits are introduced along with a number of unique and original novelties. A competent critic has christened the production, "a singing and dancing comedy."

CLASH OF VIEWS CAUSES GARRISON TO QUIT THE WILSON CABINET.

he enforced upon congress, president Wilson and his secretary of war parted official company.

In surprise to Washington, Mr. Garrison's resignation was a complete surprise to official Washington generally. He made no personal explanation several hours before the official announcement he had boarded a train with his wife for New York, and would have remained at the war department that he had gone for an indefinite stay.

Differences began early in the year, when opposition to the continental army plan began developing in congress. There had been indefinite rumors of the possibility of the secretary of war resigning, but they were not taken seriously until the official quarters. The secretary everywhere was regarded as one of the strongest men of the administration, upon whom the president leaned in the difficult situations, both domestic and international, which have marked his administration.

Correspondence Reveals Attitude. The circumstances which led up to the resignation are detailed in the secretary's correspondence with the president, which was made public by the white house. The secretary, however, discloses, believes that the training, organization and control of a military reserve should be left in the hands of the army, but is not "irrevocably" or "dogmatically" committed to any one plan. He wrote Mr. Garrison that he could not force his specific plan on congress, and added:

I must welcome a frank interchange of views and a candid and thorough comparison of all the methods proposed for obtaining the objectives we all have in view.

Garrison's Position Unjustifiable. Mr. Garrison's contentions that only the plans of the war department could be considered, seemed to the president "wholly unjustifiable." Mr. Garrison considered "reliance upon the militia for national defense as an emergency and imperiling the nation's safety."

In resigning he wrote the president: "It is evident that we have had a disagreement upon what I conceive to be fundamental principles."

Opposed Philippine Bill. Mr. Garrison characterized the Philippine bill as "unjustifiable." Mr. Clark, providing conditionally for the independence of the islands within four years, "an abandonment of the duty of this nation and a breach of trust for the Philippines." The president replied it was his judgment that the bill amendment was wise at this time, but added "it would be clearly most desirable for a more definite action in a bill embodying the same principle. He said he would withhold judgment until the final action was before him in definite form."

Presumpt Antion Needed. On January 12, secretary Garrison wrote the president: "We are facing a critical juncture with respect to the military part of the national defense program," and declared he felt that "unless the situation is dealt with promptly and effectively, we can indulge in no reasonable expectation of any acceptable result."

He insisted that there could be no substantial solution which did not result in national forces under the exclusive control of the federal government. The secretary asserted that from the beginning of the government, the acknowledged weakness of the situation arose out of lack of any system producing federal force.

The situation was rendered worse, he added, "by the existence of the troops, raised, officered, trained and governed by the states."

There is a distinct line of cleavage, Mr. Garrison held, between reliance upon the system of state troops and reliance upon national troops.

Calls Situation Deplorable. He declared that if a policy based upon the reliance upon state troops adopted, "not only had no advantage been made from the deplorable and inexcusable situation in which we have long been, but we have actually been placed across the pathway toward a proper settlement."

Criticisms Hay's Plan. The secretary severely criticized the national guard plans of chairman Hay, of the house military committee, "in my judgment the effect of the enactment of Mr. Hay's program would be to set back our progress of legitimate national defense in an entirely unjustifiable and inexcusable way. It would be, in my judgment, a betrayal of a trust which we have in this regard. It would be illusory, and apparently without any reality of substance."

There is, unfortunately, very little knowledge and very little intense personal interest in the subject of the house concerning military affairs.

Plan Appeals to Congress. Mr. Garrison declared further that Mr. Hay had the power of dealing with the subject concerning which the ratification of the house has no knowledge and about which it has never concerned itself, and suggested that Mr. Hay's proposal of settling this matter by voting money to the members of the state troops appealed to the "direct personal, political interest of the members."

Mr. Hay's proposal to include a draft provision so that at the outbreak of war the national guard could be brought under control of the national government, was characterized by Mr. Garrison as utterly failing to meet the essential objections to the perpetuation of a militia system.

Following an interview between the president and Mr. Garrison on the army plans, the secretary again wrote the president specifically stating his position. The president informed him that Mr. Hay had told him a federal volunteer system could be adopted and last the same could be achieved by utilizing the state troops and making appropriations to pay the state on condition that the federal government control the militia.

The funeral will be in charge of the El Paso lodge of Masons, to which Mr. Brown belonged. The burial will be at 2 o'clock.

The body will be accompanied to El Paso by the widow and Eugene Fox, Mr. Brown's assistant secretary. Mr. Brown died of paralysis of the heart Wednesday in Los Angeles.

PRELIMINARY DECISIONS

The president wrote the secretary and the secretary agreed that the chief need of the army was "that we should have a trained citizen reserve and that the training, organization and control of that reserve should be under immediate federal direction. He declined, however, to take an irrevocable stand on the ground that it would not be proper for him to join a committee of congress that would have to take his plan or none. He declared he did not believe members of the house dealing with military affairs were ignorant of the military necessities of the nation.

He said he would welcome a frank interchange of views, but added, "no one will expect me to acquiesce in any proposal that I regard as inadequate or illusory."

Should a bill be presented to him which he could not accept, as concerned pushing the essential thing sought, he said, it would be duty to veto it, and go to the country on its merits.

The views of the president and Mr. Garrison were reviewed in other letters, and Garrison's resignation, its acceptance, and acceptance of the secretary's resignation.

CITY HEALTH ORDER TO VACCINATE ALL AT BRIDGES CAUSES A SCARE AT THE TRACK.

The city health department's action in establishing inspectors at both international bridges, with instructions to examine and vaccinate persons coming from Juárez has thrown a scare into the race track managers across the river, and although no action had been taken up to Friday noon, the matter of a protest was under serious consideration.

The ruling of the city health authorities is to hold good for from 30 to 35 days, on the strength of reports brought to them of cases of smallpox which originated in the city.

The health department is under orders to vaccinate all persons, both Mexicans and Americans, coming into the city from across the river unless they can show acceptable vaccination certificates of recent date, or a good card from a recent vaccination.

Win a May Protest. M. J. Wins, general manager of the race track, meeting Thursday night that he would wait until he saw what the city health officials would do in the matter of returning race track pools and that, until it was actually known what course the city was taking, no action would be taken.

Everyone Inspected. Many people attend the races, practically all of them wearing El Paso, ninety percent of this crowd are American. Every street car coming over from Juárez is stopped, the passengers without a vaccination certificate are handed in large numbers coming over on foot. Automobile passengers are inspected at every international examination and vaccination.

Smallpox Under Control. The health department is in a state that there is no smallpox in that city which is not under absolute control, and that there is more than a possible one case in the Juárez hospital. "El Paso health authorities are taking precautions," they said.
