

Fort Worth Daily Gazette.

DEMOCRAT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1885.

VOL. XI, NO. 78.

Gorgeous Display of New Fall and Winter Fabrics

B. C. EVANS CO.

In such times as this, when money is so dearly earned, and you hesitate in spending a dollar, is it not a matter of unusual importance that you get some place to find a place where your money will secure the largest return? We have many real bargains in every department, and can assuredly benefit to you if your wants run in our line.

Our Millinery Department We Lead In Styles, In Prices, In the Assortment and In Exclusive Novelties.

FANCY FEATHERS AND REAL OSTRICH TIPS.
We exhibit over 750 various designs in fancy feathers and birds at prices varying from 10c upward to $2.50.
Made plumes from 75c up. $1.25 to 4.50

RIBBONS! RIBBONS!! RIBBONS!!!
We show the most fashionable styles and grades of plain, fancy or staple ribbons to be seen in Fort Worth. We keep a complete assortment of five distinct brands in satin, Gros Grain ribbon.

Extraordinary and Unprecedented Bargains in Our GLOVE DEPARTMENT.

LADIES' KID GLOVES.
Matchless Values, Equal Values
THIS DEPARTMENT CANNOT BE FOUND IN THIS OR LARGER CITIES.

OUR HOSIERY DEPT.
Over-shadow any exhibit in the state. We can only give a few prices in this department, but all grades are represented.

B. C. EVANS CO.

FORT WORTH, - - - TEXAS.

THE CITY NATIONAL BANK
Of Fort Worth.

CAPITAL PAID IN $150,000.00
RESERVE FUND 50,000.00

THE CITY NATIONAL BANK
Successors to Tidball, VanZandt & Co., Fort Worth, Texas.
$125,000.00
RESERVE FUND 25,000.00

THE TRADERS' NATIONAL BANK,
Fort Worth, Texas. Second Street, between Houston and Throckmorton.
CAPITAL PAID IN $125,000. SURPLUS FUND $15,000.

FIRE! FIRE! FIRE!
THE LEWIS HAND FIRE EXTINGUISHER.

OVER 1,000,000 NOW IN SERVICE, AND NOT ONE FAILED ON RECORD!
PREVENTIVE FOR DESTRUCTIVE FIRES.

THE LEWIS HAND FIRE EXTINGUISHER.
W. H. MABRY, Sole Agent, Fort Worth, Tex.

BATEMAN & BRO.,
Wholesale Grocers and Commission Merchants
Nos. 12, 14, 16 and 18 West Second St., Corner Throckmorton,
FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

Boots and Shoes.
Lewis Bros. & Co
315 HOUSTON ST., FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

HELL BENT!

Gov. Hoody Defeated by the Republican Candidate by 20,000 Majority.

The Whole Republican Ticket Goes In With a D...
The Republican Ticket (Goes In With a D...)
The Republican Ticket (Goes In With a D...)

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—Rain was general throughout Ohio today, and in consequence the vote polled was lighter than it would otherwise have been. The elections were for state and county officers, 37 senators, 150 representatives in the general assembly and four constitutional amendments. The returns received up to midnight indicate that Foraker is elected governor by upwards of 20,000 majority. The Democratic State Central committee at Columbus concedes Foraker's election, but they still have hopes for the legislature. The Republicans, however, claim the legislature as well as the entire state ticket. The legislature will name a United States senator at the coming session and thus the election of John Sherman to succeed himself is assured.

The prohibition vote was drawn largely from the Democratic party on account of the declaration of the latter in favor of a license law as against prohibition. THE MEN AND THEIR RECORDS.
Special to the Gazette.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—To-day's election is perhaps the most momentous political battle fought in Ohio since the famous Hough-Vandalingham campaign of 1860. In that campaign John Bronough, the abolitionist, received the enormous majority of 101,000 votes. That great election was an announcement to the world that the North established and upheld the administration of Abraham Lincoln and endorsed his war measures. The present election is likewise looked upon as a thermometer event in the political history of the Northern states. Both parties have realized this fact and in a large measure it accounts for their wonderful activity. For the first time in the history of Ohio the prohibitionists seem to hold the balance of power. So evenly matched are the two local parties that the chance of a few thousand votes would carry the day. The largest vote ever cast by the prohibitionists in Ohio was 12,000 for Schumaker, the candidate for secretary of state in 1882. In 1885 the same man (Schumaker) headed the prohibition ticket for governor and received only 8,000 votes. In the presidential election last fall St. John received 11,275 votes. Notwithstanding these figures some of the best political judges in Ohio predict that Leonard, the prohibitionist candidate for governor, to-day received 30,000 votes. The result of to-day's election therefore depends entirely upon the prohibition vote and as the heavy prohibition vote is cast in the rural districts it is not probable the final result of to-day's ballot will be known for two days. The total vote of Ohio last year was $11,455, or over twice the vote of the great Lone Star state. Notwithstanding the heavy rain that has fallen all day over one half of the state indications this evening point to a vote heavier than the vote cast for Cleveland and Blaine. The unpropitious weather has proved a great source of gratification to the Democrats, as there is a tradition among them, borne out by history, that the Republicans can never carry the state on a rainy day. Something that has never occurred before in the history of Ohio is the fact that both the leading candidates, Hoody and Foraker, were pitted against each other two years ago. If Hoody succeeds in knocking out his opponent a second time it places him in the direct line as presidential candidate in 1888. He will certainly succeed in superseding Mr. Hendricks on the next ticket for the second place if he wins to-day.

conducted the celebrated Florida and Oregon contested cases for Mr. Tilden in 1876. He has no superior in Ohio as a lawyer. In October, 1883, he was elected governor by a plurality of 12,500, and by a majority over all of 117,000. JOSEPH H. FORAKER, the Republican candidate to-day, was born in Highland county, Ohio, July 5, 1846. He comes from English stock, and a few generations back the name was spelled Foraker. Judge Foraker's career has not been replete with the brilliant achievements of his more famous opponent. Until he was sixteen years old Joseph worked on his father's farm. When the war broke out he was clerking in a small grocery store at Hillsboro, and immediately at the age of seventeen offered himself as a recruit in the Sixty-ninth Ohio regiment. The second day after his enrollment he was appointed corporal, and he has always maintained that that was the proudest day of his life. At the battle of Mission Ridge young Foraker was the first man in his regiment to scale the Confederate breastworks. He was made captain for his bravery at this battle and was finally mustered out of service at the close of the war as Capt. Foraker, by which title he is still known around Hillsboro. He laid aside the money paid him during his service in the army and paid his way through Cornell university. In 1870 he opened his law office in Cincinnati, and after two years' practice he was elected a judge of the superior court, the same court presided over many years previously by Judge Hoody. In 1882 he resigned his seat on the bench on account of ill health and resumed the practice of law. In 1885 he was nominated for governor on the Republican ticket, and was defeated after a vigorous campaign. His nomination was largely due to the friendship of Gov. Charles Foster, who was so powerful with his party at that time as to be able to dictate the nomination. Mr. Foster was at this time troubled with the senatorial naggot, and he figured that if the governor came from Southern Ohio the senator would come from Northern Ohio, and Foster has been in Northern Ohio since his defeat two years ago. Judge Foraker has taken an active part in politics in Ohio. He stamped Ohio with Mr. Blaine last year, and in the campaign closed last night he made more speeches than any other candidate ever before made in Ohio. His able contest at Toledo and Cincinnati with Gov. Hoody added much to Judge Foraker's reputation as a public speaker. He acquitted himself much better than even his friends anticipated.

Special to the Gazette.
The prohibition candidate for governor, is a Methodist minister at Springfield. He is forty-five years of age, and has been banished on the question of temperature for many years. He has occupied various pulpits in Ohio during the past twelve years. If he receives one-half of the 10,000 votes he claims he will, then Judge Hoody is elected, but if he only receives about 10,000, then Foraker is elected by a small plurality.

Special to the Gazette.
CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The Republican state central committee claims to have elected representatives in Madison, Adams, Delaware, Morrow, Morgan, Washington and Erie counties, and senators in the Fourteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-ninth districts. Ten precincts from Highland county, including three wards in Mansfield, give a net Republican gain of forty-eight. Portage county, seven precincts, eighty Democratic gain; Naudusky county, seven precincts, 250 Republican gain; Seneca county, eleven precincts, including four wards in Tiffin, 150 Republican gain; Stark county, seven precincts, including two wards in Madison, 300 Republican gain; Summit county, eleven precincts, 275 Republican gain.

Special to the Gazette.
CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The election in Ohio to-day was for state and county officers, for thirty-seven senators and 150 representatives of the general assembly, and upon four amendments to the constitution of the state, three of which relate to changing the state elections from October to November, and one to changing the term of office for township trustees. Gov. George Hoody is the Democratic candidate for re-election. Joseph B. Foraker is the Republican candidate.

Special to the Gazette.
CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The election in Ohio to-day was for state and county officers, for thirty-seven senators and 150 representatives of the general assembly, and upon four amendments to the constitution of the state, three of which relate to changing the state elections from October to November, and one to changing the term of office for township trustees. Gov. George Hoody is the Democratic candidate for re-election. Joseph B. Foraker is the Republican candidate.

Special to the Gazette.
CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The election in Ohio to-day was for state and county officers, for thirty-seven senators and 150 representatives of the general assembly, and upon four amendments to the constitution of the state, three of which relate to changing the state elections from October to November, and one to changing the term of office for township trustees. Gov. George Hoody is the Democratic candidate for re-election. Joseph B. Foraker is the Republican candidate.

HELL BENT!

Gov. Hoody Defeated by the Republican Candidate by 20,000 Majority.

The Whole Republican Ticket Goes In With a D...
The Republican Ticket (Goes In With a D...)
The Republican Ticket (Goes In With a D...)

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—Rain was general throughout Ohio today, and in consequence the vote polled was lighter than it would otherwise have been. The elections were for state and county officers, 37 senators, 150 representatives in the general assembly and four constitutional amendments. The returns received up to midnight indicate that Foraker is elected governor by upwards of 20,000 majority. The Democratic State Central committee at Columbus concedes Foraker's election, but they still have hopes for the legislature. The Republicans, however, claim the legislature as well as the entire state ticket. The legislature will name a United States senator at the coming session and thus the election of John Sherman to succeed himself is assured.

The prohibition vote was drawn largely from the Democratic party on account of the declaration of the latter in favor of a license law as against prohibition. THE MEN AND THEIR RECORDS.
Special to the Gazette.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—To-day's election is perhaps the most momentous political battle fought in Ohio since the famous Hough-Vandalingham campaign of 1860. In that campaign John Bronough, the abolitionist, received the enormous majority of 101,000 votes. That great election was an announcement to the world that the North established and upheld the administration of Abraham Lincoln and endorsed his war measures. The present election is likewise looked upon as a thermometer event in the political history of the Northern states. Both parties have realized this fact and in a large measure it accounts for their wonderful activity. For the first time in the history of Ohio the prohibitionists seem to hold the balance of power. So evenly matched are the two local parties that the chance of a few thousand votes would carry the day. The largest vote ever cast by the prohibitionists in Ohio was 12,000 for Schumaker, the candidate for secretary of state in 1882. In 1885 the same man (Schumaker) headed the prohibition ticket for governor and received only 8,000 votes. In the presidential election last fall St. John received 11,275 votes. Notwithstanding these figures some of the best political judges in Ohio predict that Leonard, the prohibitionist candidate for governor, to-day received 30,000 votes. The result of to-day's election therefore depends entirely upon the prohibition vote and as the heavy prohibition vote is cast in the rural districts it is not probable the final result of to-day's ballot will be known for two days. The total vote of Ohio last year was $11,455, or over twice the vote of the great Lone Star state. Notwithstanding the heavy rain that has fallen all day over one half of the state indications this evening point to a vote heavier than the vote cast for Cleveland and Blaine. The unpropitious weather has proved a great source of gratification to the Democrats, as there is a tradition among them, borne out by history, that the Republicans can never carry the state on a rainy day. Something that has never occurred before in the history of Ohio is the fact that both the leading candidates, Hoody and Foraker, were pitted against each other two years ago. If Hoody succeeds in knocking out his opponent a second time it places him in the direct line as presidential candidate in 1888. He will certainly succeed in superseding Mr. Hendricks on the next ticket for the second place if he wins to-day.

HELL BENT!

Gov. Hoody Defeated by the Republican Candidate by 20,000 Majority.

The Whole Republican Ticket Goes In With a D...
The Republican Ticket (Goes In With a D...)
The Republican Ticket (Goes In With a D...)

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—Rain was general throughout Ohio today, and in consequence the vote polled was lighter than it would otherwise have been. The elections were for state and county officers, 37 senators, 150 representatives in the general assembly and four constitutional amendments. The returns received up to midnight indicate that Foraker is elected governor by upwards of 20,000 majority. The Democratic State Central committee at Columbus concedes Foraker's election, but they still have hopes for the legislature. The Republicans, however, claim the legislature as well as the entire state ticket. The legislature will name a United States senator at the coming session and thus the election of John Sherman to succeed himself is assured.

The prohibition vote was drawn largely from the Democratic party on account of the declaration of the latter in favor of a license law as against prohibition. THE MEN AND THEIR RECORDS.
Special to the Gazette.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—To-day's election is perhaps the most momentous political battle fought in Ohio since the famous Hough-Vandalingham campaign of 1860. In that campaign John Bronough, the abolitionist, received the enormous majority of 101,000 votes. That great election was an announcement to the world that the North established and upheld the administration of Abraham Lincoln and endorsed his war measures. The present election is likewise looked upon as a thermometer event in the political history of the Northern states. Both parties have realized this fact and in a large measure it accounts for their wonderful activity. For the first time in the history of Ohio the prohibitionists seem to hold the balance of power. So evenly matched are the two local parties that the chance of a few thousand votes would carry the day. The largest vote ever cast by the prohibitionists in Ohio was 12,000 for Schumaker, the candidate for secretary of state in 1882. In 1885 the same man (Schumaker) headed the prohibition ticket for governor and received only 8,000 votes. In the presidential election last fall St. John received 11,275 votes. Notwithstanding these figures some of the best political judges in Ohio predict that Leonard, the prohibitionist candidate for governor, to-day received 30,000 votes. The result of to-day's election therefore depends entirely upon the prohibition vote and as the heavy prohibition vote is cast in the rural districts it is not probable the final result of to-day's ballot will be known for two days. The total vote of Ohio last year was $11,455, or over twice the vote of the great Lone Star state. Notwithstanding the heavy rain that has fallen all day over one half of the state indications this evening point to a vote heavier than the vote cast for Cleveland and Blaine. The unpropitious weather has proved a great source of gratification to the Democrats, as there is a tradition among them, borne out by history, that the Republicans can never carry the state on a rainy day. Something that has never occurred before in the history of Ohio is the fact that both the leading candidates, Hoody and Foraker, were pitted against each other two years ago. If Hoody succeeds in knocking out his opponent a second time it places him in the direct line as presidential candidate in 1888. He will certainly succeed in superseding Mr. Hendricks on the next ticket for the second place if he wins to-day.

HELL BENT!

Gov. Hoody Defeated by the Republican Candidate by 20,000 Majority.

The Whole Republican Ticket Goes In With a D...
The Republican Ticket (Goes In With a D...)
The Republican Ticket (Goes In With a D...)

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—Rain was general throughout Ohio today, and in consequence the vote polled was lighter than it would otherwise have been. The elections were for state and county officers, 37 senators, 150 representatives in the general assembly and four constitutional amendments. The returns received up to midnight indicate that Foraker is elected governor by upwards of 20,000 majority. The Democratic State Central committee at Columbus concedes Foraker's election, but they still have hopes for the legislature. The Republicans, however, claim the legislature as well as the entire state ticket. The legislature will name a United States senator at the coming session and thus the election of John Sherman to succeed himself is assured.

The prohibition vote was drawn largely from the Democratic party on account of the declaration of the latter in favor of a license law as against prohibition. THE MEN AND THEIR RECORDS.
Special to the Gazette.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—To-day's election is perhaps the most momentous political battle fought in Ohio since the famous Hough-Vandalingham campaign of 1860. In that campaign John Bronough, the abolitionist, received the enormous majority of 101,000 votes. That great election was an announcement to the world that the North established and upheld the administration of Abraham Lincoln and endorsed his war measures. The present election is likewise looked upon as a thermometer event in the political history of the Northern states. Both parties have realized this fact and in a large measure it accounts for their wonderful activity. For the first time in the history of Ohio the prohibitionists seem to hold the balance of power. So evenly matched are the two local parties that the chance of a few thousand votes would carry the day. The largest vote ever cast by the prohibitionists in Ohio was 12,000 for Schumaker, the candidate for secretary of state in 1882. In 1885 the same man (Schumaker) headed the prohibition ticket for governor and received only 8,000 votes. In the presidential election last fall St. John received 11,275 votes. Notwithstanding these figures some of the best political judges in Ohio predict that Leonard, the prohibitionist candidate for governor, to-day received 30,000 votes. The result of to-day's election therefore depends entirely upon the prohibition vote and as the heavy prohibition vote is cast in the rural districts it is not probable the final result of to-day's ballot will be known for two days. The total vote of Ohio last year was $11,455, or over twice the vote of the great Lone Star state. Notwithstanding the heavy rain that has fallen all day over one half of the state indications this evening point to a vote heavier than the vote cast for Cleveland and Blaine. The unpropitious weather has proved a great source of gratification to the Democrats, as there is a tradition among them, borne out by history, that the Republicans can never carry the state on a rainy day. Something that has never occurred before in the history of Ohio is the fact that both the leading candidates, Hoody and Foraker, were pitted against each other two years ago. If Hoody succeeds in knocking out his opponent a second time it places him in the direct line as presidential candidate in 1888. He will certainly succeed in superseding Mr. Hendricks on the next ticket for the second place if he wins to-day.