

TRIP INTO MEXICO. A Trip to the City of Mexico Via the Rio Grande River and Vera Cruz.

Gathered by the Wayside of the Almost Unknown People of Our Sister Republic.

Lower Rio Grande. Correspondence of the Gazette.

March 15.—To nearly everyone it must be a matter of surprise...

It is chiefly owing to the predominance of its patriarchs, Abrahams, Isaacas, Jacobs, men who gave themselves...

Headed with these rudimentary stages of development, it is not surprising...

There is no Jay Gould to conjure up the magnificent influence of his golden hand...

The climate along the frontier here is no less favorable to the husbandman...

When capitalist farmers come into this country, as they surely will, their great object and bonanza will be sugar-cane...

It is a little to the southwest for a hundred miles, crossing the Terras Calientes, or hot lands of the coast.

rarely if ever perished, and that since the war no Brownsville specks of bloody deeds have darkened the columns of the Texas press.

Here we crossed the river to Matamoras. At this point the river is only seventy-five yards wide.

There is no doubt that the early history of the country, the exports of Vera Cruz consisted chiefly of gold and silver and other valuable minerals from the mines in the interior.

From Vera Cruz the direction of the road is a little to the southwest for a hundred miles, crossing the Terras Calientes, or hot lands of the coast.

It is an English built city of 7000 people and lies directly at the foot of the range that contains the volcano, the capital of the district of the same name and is fifty-seven miles from Vera Cruz in a straight line.

Here are many fine buildings, including the cathedral. This place has something of a name for its manufactures. Cotton, woolen and leather goods are produced on quite a large scale.

It is a little more than 7000 feet above the sea-level, and for an old Mexican city, has fine architecture.

much of this to the fact that she has many manufacturing, which include glass, earthenware, coarse woolen cloth, soap and many other articles.

One of the most interesting of the buildings here is the one known as the 'Mansion' hotel, for a term of five years, to some good, reliable hotel-man.

The strike is about to culminate and therefore I propose to rent the Mansion hotel, for a term of five years, to some good, reliable hotel-man.

W. W. DENN. One of Three Ways. FORT WORTH, TEX., March 27.—Editor GAZETTE: Which shall it be? Force and compulsion or arbitration and conciliation?

Force, if you will, but it will not convince; it may repress resistance, but it will be under protest; it may bring a temporary truce, not a permanent peace.

It will not do to judge of the future by the experience of the past. The present conditions never existed in the history of humanity.

Justly Merited. The reputation of E. W. Provine's fresh roasted coffee is rapidly coming to the front. It is a well-known fact he has the best patent power-roaster in the state.

WINNSBORO. Business settled down to its usual summer dullness—Railroad Talk.

WINNSBORO, TEX., March 25.—Business has settled down to its usual summer dullness already, and one can hardly tell if the strike is affecting us, except for the energetic 'kicking' of the East Line men.

Notwithstanding the dull times Winsboro continues to improve in a substantial way. Several handsome private residences have been put up in the past few months.
