

WEATHER FAVORABLE FOR WHEAT GROWING

Charles Dammer, one of the best known farmers in this section of the Panhandle, when asked regarding the wheat with reference to its present state, said: "Nothing could be finer for the wheat than the snow and cold of the present. The wheat is covered and the moisture is sufficient to every need of the plant. The growth being developed at present, goes far towards assuring a crop of unusual worth during the incoming year."

"While this may be rather hard on the cattle interests of the Panhandle, the grain farmer has much for which to be thankful in connection with the excellent fall of snow and that it is being so gradually absorbed by the soil."

DAVIDSON FEARS LIVESTOCK LOSS

Frank L. Davidson, cattle and hide inspector for Potter county, when asked yesterday forenoon regarding the condition of cattle in this section of the Panhandle, said:

"So far there have been no deaths among the cattle to speak of, even among those herds not being fed. This state of affairs cannot exist for long, however, for the strain upon livestock is becoming great. Not alone is the lack of food telling upon the animals, but also the lack of water and of rest. The animals until forced to do so, by absolute exhaustion, will not lie upon the snow."

"If this weather continues there will be much death among the unfed stuff in this part of the Panhandle. It is the hope of the cattlemen that the weather moderates and that the thaw will be general. This will expose the grasses, and the cattle would then avail themselves of good grazing that is so plentiful under the snow."

Mark Logan, president of the Chamber of Commerce, speaking on the conditions that are proving so hard on the cattle, said: "This all goes to prove that the day for the really large herds in the Panhandle is passing if not already past. There is a demand for the man with the herd just big enough to be fed, when feeding is needed. This might be carried in connection with farming of sufficient size to produce the feed necessary to sustain the cattle."

"This matter of clearing the ground upon which the cattle might sleep, is not a hard one. The same mode of sweeping snow from a liberally proportioned space, as that followed by the Amarillo Improvement company, could be used with good effect. Our car track was the only dry roadway in the city, and by employing the same course, the cattle could have been provided bare earth upon which to rest."

"That the farmers of this section of the country have much feed and insufficient livestock to which to feed it is just as sure as that the cattle men have much of stock and no feed for the same. If there might be a process of combination of the two elements, a more uniform and productive system would doubtless result for good. The feed of many of the farmers has gone begging for buyers among the cattlemen, and now the cattle are going hungry through lack of the feed."

"What we need is a more scientific meeting of the conditions that are liable to confront us in this section of the state. We ought to get away from the chance condition. We ought to so organize that we may make things shape themselves to our needs, instead of sitting idly by and trusting to a chance shaping. The unfortunate fact that the latter course is that often the shaping is to the hurt of the various interests that should be conserved. Give us mere conservative business men in the farming, in the cattle growing and in every line of endeavor in the Panhandle."

"Let us begin to study the produce wealth from the soil, to sell what we raise and to buy from our merchants the things needful to our comfort. When these things receive attention they should, we will get beyond some of the conditions that now confront us, to our hurt."
