sorts what he says to the deed. He is broad and fair. The vulgar are biased and petty."
Also, said Confucius, a gentleman is a good sport, or, in the words of the philosopher: "A gentleman has no rivalries—except, perhaps in archery; and then, throughout the struggle, he is still the gentleman."

Furthermore, we are told by Confucius, a gentleman "has no likes and no dislikes below heaven. He follows right. Gentlemen trust in justice; the vulgar trust in favor."
Upon being questioned further by the persistent Tzu-kung, Confucius replied: "A gentleman considers what is right; the vulgar consider what will pay. A gentleman wishes to be slow to speak and quick to act. He helps the needy; he does not swell riches."

However, the Puritan fathers had an altogether different conception of a gentleman. Confucius held a gentleman to be one who trusts in justice and not in favor, but the Puritans granted "gentlemen" special privileges under law.

Thus, a code of statutes enacted in Massachusetts in 1641, provided as follows:

"No man shall be beaten with above 40 stripes, nor shall any true gentleman, nor any man equal to a gentleman, be punished with whipping unless his crime be very shameful."

It appears, therefore, that being a gentleman in Massachusetts was a condition of life, rather than of character. The Chinese definition is the better. And, by the way, how many gentlemen would still be considered such, if the Confucius specifications were strictly applied.

INTENSITY.

Somebody once asked Henry Ward Beecher what he best liked to do of all things in the world.

"Preaching," answered the famous preacher.

But what do you like best for recreation? That's your vocation. What's your avocation?

"Preaching," answered Beecher.

"Yes, yes, but surely you need something else. What do you like to do to give you a relief from preaching?"

"Preaching," again came the answer.

Henry Ward Beecher was not a narrow man, but he evidently believed in intensity.

He liked his work so well that he could even find relief from work in more work. Is it any wonder that he succeeded in it?

It must be noted, however, that his work was of a very broad kind. By it and through it he could follow every avenue of human thought, if he would. He could thereby compass that most admirable definition of education—"to know a great deal about some one thing and a little about everything."

Nevertheless his answers were a lesson in the value of intensity to achieve accomplishment.

"Preaching" and "preaching" and "preaching" made him a great preacher, perhaps America's greatest preacher.

SECOND CEREMONIAL OF KHIVA SHRINE PROVES GREATEST SUCCESS

The Khiva Temple last night that a belated ceremonial would probably be held late in December for the benefit of those who wish to get in at the present rate of $75. It is probable, he thought, that the fee will be raised by the Texas Shrine Council to $100. Those who do not take advantage of the belated ceremonial, should one be held, will in all likelihood have to pay the increased fee if they wish to come in later.

ON BEING A GENTLEMAN.

What is a gentleman? asks a newspaper of its women readers.

The women agree that a gentleman must be kind, considerate, honorable, truthful, respectable, intelligent and possess all other standard virtues.

The true nature of a gentleman has been under discussion for some 2400 years. In the fifth century B. C., the Chinese philosopher Confucius was asked by his disciple, Tzu-kung: "What is a gentleman?"

And Confucius replied: "A gentleman puts words into deed, and

ARE YOU SUPERSTITIOUS?

Unlucky Thirteen.

In New York there is a "Thirteen Club" bent on exploding the old terror of "thirteen at table" but there are still many skeptical folk who could not be forced to join such a society. Among these is a great writer who not long ago arrived late at a dinner at which he was guest of honor, only to make his apologies and withdraw hastily when he discovered that "the thirteenth chair" had been reserved for him.

Many of New York's skyscrapers testify to the currency of the thirteen superstition by skipping from 12 to 14 in the numbering of the floors.

All people of all times have possessed "lucky" and "unlucky" numbers. The Deaf and Dumb Man Confesses Thefts Totalling $25,000

By Associated Press. NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Thefts totalling $25,000 have been confessed by a deaf and dumb department store packer, the police announced today.

Max Nouffeld, now held in $10,000 bail for the grand jury, was said to have made the confession, after he was alleged to have been caught with a $180 fur coat on which he had been checked out of the store as carrying on his "rubber plant" purchased late yesterday.

His "system," said other an innovation in department store robbery, was alleged to have included the buying of a cheap but bulky object and packing it for shipment to some one who had purchased valuable goods. The he would walk out of the store with the stolen bundle, the police say.
