AT THE DEAD HOUR OF NIGHT

While a Guest in a Texas Home Rapes a Helpless Woman.

PRAYER AT THE BREAKFAST

Table the Next Morning Led by Rev. W. G. Veal—The Trial of Jones is on at Dallas—The Woman Who Had Suffered for Twenty Years Tells Her Story.

Dallas, Nov. 18.—(Special.)—The trial of James M. Jones, the man who has been in the city for some time, is on at Dallas this morning.

The wife of Dr. R. H. Jones, the slayer of Capt. W. G. Veal of Fort Worth, in this city during the great State fair.

Dr. Jones was taken before Judge Tucker this afternoon on a writ of habeas corpus. He has been in jail since the tragedy, and his friends desired to ascertain whether or not the case was a habeas corpus, in order to secure the liberty of Dr. Jones on bail pending his trial.

The court room was packed to suffocation and the prisoner sat by the side of his counsel, Bassett, Say and Moss, as cool as on the morning when he sent a leaden messenger into the brain of Captain Veal.

Mrs. Jones was the first witness placed on the stand. She is a woman of 40, with an intelligent and refined face, a drooping figure and most modest and genteel manners. She was richly but not fashionably dressed and during the time she was testifying one could have heard a pin drop.

The only words that she dropped from the lips of Jones when he killed Veal, were: "G-d-d-o-m, he ravished my wife." No one believed him then. To-night they do.

Twenty years ago Mrs. Jones was the widow of Bullington, young, handsome and the richest woman in Northern Texas. Her father, James Smith, had been an early and respected pioneer and her family connections were of the highest.

She had a little babe 18 months old at the time this story of crime began. The only child born of her union with Bullington.

One night she was the guest of Mrs. S. E. Cookrell, and the Cookrell family, then as now, was one of the most esteemed in Texas, where she met the Rev. W. G. Veal, then one of the most popular and able preachers of the day.

She was introduced to him, they both being guests at the same house, and was in his company during the earlier hours of the night. According to her story on the witness stand, at midnight that night she was awakened by a noise, and on looking by the side of her bed, she saw Rev. W. G. Veal. She screamed, and he said sternly, "Hush. You will be heard." The shock was so great that she sank almost fainting in her bed.

Veal threw himself upon her and attempted to ravish her. She then left her room.

Overwhelmed with shame and with grief, fearful of the disgrace and notoriety that would be visited upon her if she made known her wrongs the Widow Bullington resolved to seek the secret office of a mad woman. Her father, her brother, her husband and her uncle, her only male protectors were a poor cripple, having lost both hands in a cotton gin.

The next morning the outraged woman, Rev. W. G. Veal and the family with other guests, met in the dining hall. Rev. Veal led in prayer, and the woman he had ravished the night before knelt in the family circle and offered a silent prayer to the Lord above.

A year later she married Dr. R. H. Jones.

She says that Veal came to her home four years after he had assaulted her in the dead hour of night at the Cookrell home. He held out his arms as if to embrace her and she spurned him and told him to depart from her home.

Eight years ago he paid her another visit, but she ordered him never to darken her door again and he never did.

Last spring the secret which had been carried into her life for twenty years became a load greater than she could bear and she divulged it to her husband.

In answer to questions propounded by Colonel Jerome C. Kearby for the state, Mrs. Jones said she had never written a letter to Captain Veal, but she had never visited him in her life and had never visited him in the city after the rape at midnight.

Mrs. Dr. Morgan, Frank Cookrell and several other character witnesses were called. They testified that Mrs. Jones from girlhood to womanhood was most estimable and virtuous and of most unimpeachable character.

Mrs. S. E. Cookrell swore that she knew Rev. Veal when he was a lively young preacher before the war. She created quite a sensation when she stated that Rev. Veal wanted to take improper liberties with young girls at the very altar, and that she warned them one and all to have nothing to do with Rev. Veal.

At 10:30 court adjourned until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The attorneys for the state have not yet shown their hand. The evidence of Mrs. Jones created as great a sensation as the killing of Captain Veal by her husband and is the sole topic of conversation in the city to-night.

SOUTHERN PRESS.

THE CHAIRMAN OF THE NEW ASSOCIATION WRITES

An Open Letter, Telling Why Southern Newspapers Withdraw from the New York Association of Seven Papers.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 18.—The following statement from Adolph Ochs, proprietor of the Chattanooga Times, explains itself.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 18, 1892.—The publication in the New York Times that the proprietors of the Chattanooga Times is disgraced and is likely to withdraw from the Southern Association of Presses, is without the slightest foundation. I have for the past ten days persistently refused to receive reports of the New York associated press, though I have every day.

The Southern associated press has no right to be a member of the Southern Association of Presses. It is a membership every day newspaper in North and South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, East Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, and heretofore received New York associated press news, paying therefor $10,000 per annum.

The Southern associated press has by contract control in the states mentioned of all news of the United press and through these two organizations the two principal foreign news agencies.

The proprietors and publishers of the Southern daily papers had every opportunity to continue their relations with the New York associated press, and on terms they could have considered advantageous. They chose to decline all overtures. It is supposed they knew what they were doing, but being successful business men they were not to be deterred by the press bear on it will to the New York associated press, but join in the movement that includes, with exceptions hardly worth mentioning, every daily newspaper in the United States from Seattle to Bangor and from the Lakes to the Gulf, to put a stop to the arrangements which enable the New York City dailies to control the news of the country, and to exact whatever they desired. The door is open to the New York associated press to come in on equal terms with the most favored. The Southern associated press hopes its former New York City associates may soon realize the folly of their attitude toward the progressive movement that for a wonder was not commenced years ago. Adolph S. Ochs, Chairman of the executive committee of the Southern associated press.

CLARK DEMOCRATS

Assembling in Numbers at Waco for a Conference.

WHAT COURSE SHALL BE TAKEN

To Perpetuate and Extend the Organization Will Be Considered.

A Number that Clark Heads Will Fall of Austin. Official Votes of Travis and Other Counties Now in a Close Contest in Palo Pinto County.

A CLARK CONCLAVE

Waco, Tex., Nov. 18.—(Special.)—Tomorrow representatives of the Clark wing of the Texas Democracy will meet in this city at the call of State Chairman W. O. Henderson. The meeting is called for the purpose of laying plans for the future, of extending the organization and for consultation. Quite a number of representative Democrats are in the city to-night and it is probable the attendance to-morrow will be good.

Travis

Austin, Tex., Nov. 18.—(Special.)—The official count of the vote of Travis county was concluded to-day by the county commissioners and gives Clark 317, Hogg 219, Nugent 89, Houston 8, Pronger 8, H. and C. H. Clark's plurality 108. Clark's majority 194. The total in the county was 730, falling off at least 200 from what it was expected it would be.

Your reporter learned to-day from very reliable sources that Governor Henderson is in the city and that the Democratic wing would hold a conference to-morrow for the purpose of considering the advisability of decapitating all the Clark men in the capital, of whom there are known to be quite a good many. No friction of any kind has been reported in Austin between the two factions, and if what is indicated above is done it will be the first break.
