THURSDAY, AUGUST 25, 1898.

About thirteen thousand new names have been added to the pension roll this year, and the end is not yet. The Gulf, Beaumont and Great Northern railway company, capital stock, $350,000, has been chartered. Admiral Sampson states as an ascertained official fact that "out of 12,000 men on the American fleet there have been only twenty casualties throughout the war." Considering what the fleet has done, the world must wonder at this.

FIRST OF THE TROOPS TO REACH SPAIN.

Steamer Alicante Arrives at Coruna and Enthusiastic Crowds Gather on the Quay There.

Coruna, Spain, Aug. 25.—The Spanish steamer Alicante, with the first of Spanish repatriated soldiers to arrive from Santiago de Cuba, reached here yesterday.

Enormous crowds gathered on the quays, but were not allowed to get near the vessel for fear of yellow fever contagion. All the military and civil authorities were present.

Some of the sick will be taken to the Don Lazretto, where they will be quarantined. Others will be kept five days in hospital ships before they are dispatched to their homes. Those who are in good health will be promptly disembarked.

The queen regent sent a message to the troops on board the Alicante, congratulating them upon their conduct in the field, and saying that she proposed to be the first to welcome them home.

The reading of the dispatch was received with great enthusiasm. There was no yellow fever on board, though 60 died of other diseases during the voyage.

The car contained about 12 passengers and was traveling at about a 20-mile rate when the bolt struck, exploding the motors and setting fire to the car.

A FATAL OVERSIGHT.

Col. Digger, one of the Klondike's most genial and popular multi-millionaires, was as pale as a ghost.

The mercury was lower in the thermometer tube than the price of silver in New York, and the wind had blown the cold-wave flag full of holes.

The colonel sat alone in the glittering library of his more than palatial mansion, and there was the look of expectancy in his eyes, which comes to those who may mount upward to the skies or sink to the abyssal depths of the darkest despair, depending entirely upon what the news may be that he is expecting.

For sometime he sat as if stunned, but this could not endure, and shaking himself as if he would throw off the burden of his doubt, he arose to his feet and strode toward the hall, where over the door hung the antlered head of that mighty caribou which had mastered the Yukon for a dozen years.

At the portals of the entrance the colonel met Mrs. Digger, who had but at that moment emerged from the cellar of the mansion.

For an instant they looked into each other's eyes and the colonel spoke.

"Well," he said, with ill-suppressed emotion, "well, how many barrels did you find?"

"They are all gone, Henry," replied the trembling woman. "We used the last of the last one last night."

Col. Digger clutched at his heart as if a fatal pain had caught him there, and he gasped like a stricken giant ere he spoke.

"We are lost!" he shrieked; "irretrievably lost! There isn't a pound of fine in town, and those fool clerks of mine made a mistake and shipped fifteen barrels of pickled pork to the San Francisco mint instead of the fifteen barrels of gold dust they ought to have shipped. Fool, fool, that they were!" he raved, and his wife sought to comfort him, but the millionaire refused to be comforted, for his soul was above the dross of gold and he had begun to realize what true worth was.

Those Foolish Questions.

Supper—Hey, Chummy, wet ye doin', Slicker? Chummy—Now, I'm washin' my feet.

Nearly an Elopement.

It was a dark night. Slowly down the marble steps into the garden stole a lithe figure of perhaps 240 pounds.

In her hands she carried a small parcel. It was a Saratoga trunk. She was clad only in garments, with the exception of her hat and shoes and stockings.

She glanced carefully around, and seeing no one, she took a step forward.

"Ah, ha! Foiled!"

It was a deep cry of triumph. A large man of 5 feet 3 inches sprang from the bushes and seized the maiden. In spite of her struggles he bore her into the house, a glow of victory in his eyes.

Was it a stern parent ruthlessly preventing his daughter's elopement? No. It was a calm suburban citizen, and he was preventing his new cook from jumping her job.

Unsaturnately Answered.

Five-year-old Dickey had been instructed that whenever he wanted anything he should pray for it.

He had prayed long and earnestly for a bicycle, but his father thinking him too young to ride one, had bought him a tricycle. When he awoke, on the morning of his birthday, and found the three-wheeler by his bedside, he was disgusted.

"Doesn't the Lord know the difference between a bicycle and a tricycle?" he whimpered.

The Hedge Doctor.

A "hedge doctor," a kind of a quack in Ireland, was being examined at an inquest on his treatment of a patient who had died.

"I gave him ipseumanna," he said. "You might just as well have given him the aurora borealis," said the coroner.

"Indeed, yer honor, and that's just what I should have given him next if he hadn't died."

Dreadful Suspense.

"Well, dear, how did the election go?" asked Mrs. Cumso, when her husband returned home after waiting for the returns on the night of the general election of 1900.

"It's awfully close," replied Cumso. "It will take the official returns from Hawaii to decide it, and there is no cable communication with that portion of the United States."

Spanish-America. Every true American heart should throb with sympathy at this time for Mexico at the mention of the days September 15th and 16th, which are the same to Mexicans as July 4th is to Americans. These are Mexico's two greatest holidays. President Diaz was born on September 15th at 11 o'clock at night and one hour later (September 16th) was the birthday of Independent Mexico. It is no wonder therefore that the Mexicans love these two holidays, which represent so much to them. On the night of September 15th at exactly 11 o'clock from every city, town, hill and dale over the great Republic, one mighty shout issues from a million freemen's throats: "Viva Mexico!" "Viva el Presidente!" In Mexico the day is celebrated with great splendor. Nearly a quarter of a million of people take part in the festivities and the scene rivals anything ever presented on the American Continent.
