SAM SANGER.

MANLEY GIVES HIS SIDE OF THE AFFAIR.

Tells Why He Had to Leave Wilmington and the Cause of the Trouble at That Place.

New York, Nov. 14.—A dispatch to The Herald from Asbury Park, N. J., says:

A. L. Manley, editor of the Wilmington (N. C.) Record, whose office was destroyed by white citizens on Thursday is now in Asbury Park with his brother-in-law, Rev. Ingles. He fled from Wilmington to escape lynching by the mob. It was through an editorial in The Record that the recent rioting in Wilmington and the attendant loss of life came about.

When seen Manley said that while he was perfectly willing to tell the story of his troubles as far as he himself was concerned, there were some features of the case which he could not make public at present, as the safety of others might be affected.

Manley said that it all grew out of the fact that the much talked of editorial in The Record had been misquoted by the press of North Carolina and only part of it had been printed with editorials tending to inflame the whites of the south.
This, he said, had been done to try to scare the white voters for political effect. He did not seem to think that the editors of the papers which started the blaze of riot realized the harm which would follow the articles printed in their papers.

The editorial which appeared in The Record, Manley said, was called forth by a speech made by Mrs. Felton before the Agricultural society of Tybee Island, Ga., early in August. During her speech Mrs. Felton said that the money which was collected for foreign missions could be spent to a better advantage at home in educating young white girls.
She said that owing to the carelessness of poor white men of the south their girls are left victims of the colored men.
Then she spoke, according to Manley's statement, of the low moral standing of the colored race. He says she advocated lynching as the only means of eradicating these evils.

Manley's editorial in The Record was a reply to Mrs. Felton's speech. This editorial inflamed a large portion of North Carolina. Manley says he did not intend to attack any class or race, but simply wrote as he did to defend the defamed colored man. In this editorial Manley said:

"Poor white men are careless in the matter of protecting their women, especially on the farms. They are careless of their conduct toward them and our experience among poor white people in the country teaches us that women of that race are not more particular in the matter of chaste meetings with colored men than are the white men with colored women. Meetings of this kind go on for some time until the woman's infatuation or the man's boldness brings attention to them and the man is lynched."

The very long editorial from which the above is taken was published on Aug.
18. Manley says that for nearly a week after it was printed nothing was said to him about it by the residents of Wilmington or vicinity, and his relations with them were of the usually friendly nature until the white press took up the matter nearly a week later. From that time until now they have attacked him and his paper in every conceivable way until at last he was compelled to flee for his life.

When asked as to the present situation at Wilmington, Manley said that he had been absent several days, and he would rather not be quoted as expressing an opinion on that subject.

When asked if he intended to return to North Carolina he replied that that was another question which he could not answer at present. There were facts connected with that part of the story which might affect others, and he thought it would be best not to say anything as to his future prospects.

Manley would not tell how much his losses were at the hands of the mob.
All he would say was that he had lost everything he owned in the world. He had carried an insurance on his property, but he said that there was no clause in the policy which insured against the fury of a mob.

The Eagle learns that a five foot vein of lignite has been discovered four miles below Wellborn at a depth of about one hundred feet. The find was made by prospectors who have been working in that vicinity for some time.

W. H. Dozier of Thompson Creek, brought to The Eagle office yesterday a stalk of ribbon cane, raised on up-land, and measuring seven and a half feet stripped. He also had a sample of the syrup made from the cane, which is a clear and pure as could be desired. Mr.
Dozier has an immense amount of cane planted for those who desire it for
