First Plant at the Neck City Requested From the Desire of the Italian Government to Buy American Built Bottoms; Pine Producers Later Enter the Field

BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 19.—The versatility of Americans is well exemplified in this Texas city where clerks, cattlemen, farmers, barbers and others turn to work in shipyards.

A first step has been taken in the program here for the dispatch of the way.

How island may not be visited by passing the only American shipyard located on a spot that a year ago was a swamp.

In these times the progress of shipbuilding here and at other Gulf ports would make a story with romantic phases.

Before the demand for boats became so urgent, there was one small plant engaged in building fishing and pleasure boats.

The first of the larger plants in the government's plans to build vessels in the United States.

About this time the government was building the shipyard.
