AMERICAN ENGINEERS IN FRANCE PERFORM A STUPENDOUS TASK

FOUR hundred French boys, corresponding to the Associated American engineers, are doing more constructive work in France today than was ever done on the European continent since the beginning of the war, and more than was ever done in any day on all the front and harbor work of the United States. These engineers give some idea of the magnitude of the work they are doing in the early construction work going on in France, exceeding the most gigantic operations ever undertaken in human history.

The work for material is so tremendous that the forestry force will have to be increased heavily here. Already 100,000 trees are being cut and the construction work is being increased. With this increase the engineering force engaged on construction work will be much more than before. It is estimated that 100,000 men will be employed on the European continent, the largest number ever engaged on work of this nature.
