EDITOR GAZETTE:

What few wind mills there are in our country are like candidates' tongues, they are always running, at least they are enjoying a fine chance to run when they are turned loose, for every day is a repetition of the day just past, with cool winds and clouds flying high and good prospects for more rain. The rain last week came in good season will undoubtedly help the e-

...count home, for the greatest man of the olden time said that "I was one of God's first temples, ere men learned to hew the shaft and lay the arch and spread the roof above him."

Isn't not a strange thing how a man's vanity will show itself in spite of all he can do, when he knows that by a little effort on his part he can do just a little better. For instance, last Sunday the Bachelor was at a neighbor's house and someone came by riding a bicycle and some of the young ladies waved their handkerchiefs at him, and the way he did make that old bicycle hum was a sight to see. I have no idea which one of the Shiner boys it was.

The ball at Hermit's post office Saturday was a decided success. Everything went off smooth and nice. While Hollas, the good looking clerk from Seydler & Eschenburg's establishment was there and Paul Franko and the rest of the Shiner Firemen's Band furnished music and good music, too, for the pleasant occasion, and we young people tripped the light fantastic toe until the glorious morning light was just fading, the east and bade farewell to the light and shady china trees, the sweet music and last, but not least, the dear girls, and went to our respective homes with only pleasant thoughts, for the good times cannot last always without intermission.

I am certainly sorry for those old bachelors down at Hochheim, but I am glad that I am not one of them, nor will I ever be. I must admit that I am an old bachelor, but I live at Valley View Farm, on the river, six miles above Hochheim on week days, and twenty-six miles on a right hot day. But I am sure if they would get a move on them and go to Seydler & Eschenburg, of Shiner, and get a real old Sunday go to see 'em' shirt from their large selection of gents' furnishing goods and spruce up a little, those young ladies around Hochheim would teach them a new lesson that beats "single cussadness" all to pieces.

Will some of the young ladies of Shiner be kind enough to explain why it is that Seydler & Eschenburg's good looking clerk is slowly but surely becoming an old bachelor himself.

Charles Flato and Wm. Green, the boss lumbermen of Shiner, paid our country a flying visit last Monday.

Mr. Richard Prusse has also decided to pitch his tent in our midst and remain for a season.

Messrs. Louis Hill and Willie Miller, of Black Jack Springs, Fayette county, are fishing and visiting here this week.
