SOME OF THE LIBERAL TRICKS.

The True Character of the Carpet Bag Party Shown Up by An Old-Time Liberal.

I had not intended to say anything, either on the stump, or through the press, but I have been forced to do so by the slurs and imputations cast upon me by the organs of the Carpet-Bag party. It is also due to some of my friends that I should give the reason for the stand I have taken in the present contest.

The reason I am opposing this burlesque carpet-bag parody on Liberalism, is that I am an American in every sense of the word, and I propose to exercise my rights as an American citizen.

I come of a family who came to America in 1612. In every war, both internal and with foreign powers, since their arrival in America, some of the family blood has been spilled. My father fought through the war of 1812, against the armies of England; in 1830-1, he was in the war against the Sacs and Foxes in Illinois. My life has been passed at the outposts of civilization, battling to advance the interests of mankind, and in the establishment of the laws of our country. In 1853, a boy of seventeen, I crossed the plains to California. I worked in Marysville, Oroville, Lynchburg, Sacramento, Gibsonvale, Downeville, Shasta, and have been known in nearly all the cities and towns of that state; in all portions of Nevada, I am known and have been for years. It is an easy matter to trace my record back. My record in this territory is a part of the history of Utah. For the past twenty-one years, I have been acquainted with all the acts of the Liberal party; also with all the actors who took part in that great drama, in which a few men were pitted against the entire Mormon church. I know the record of every man, both good and bad, who took part in what we considered the struggle for liberty. There was a small number whose watch-word was honor. We had, at times, fair minded judges and district attorneys, good as well as corrupt marshals, corrupt judges at times, at times, sets of officers who were all willing to do what was right, to work honestly and fearlessly. A change of administration would send us dishonest judges and marshals who would undo what had taken years to accomplish. Railroads were built and mines developed; the tide of emigration set towards Utah; we filled our ranks; some men were honest, while others were dishonest. In the past, men sacrificed their business, donated their money, allowed themselves to run for office, and be sacrificed—with success. All this, for American principles.

What were the claims of the Liberal party in early days?

We claimed that the laws of the country must be obeyed; that no theocracy should or would be planted on the American continent; that the power of the Mormon church must be abolished; free government must be established in Utah; that the ballot box must be pure and represent the will of the people; church and state must be separated; and entire freedom of speech and press must prevail. We simply demanded what our constitution guaranteed.

This I, with the rest of you, fought for, believing then, as I do now, that we were right. I saw no change in the sentiments of my friends and co-workers until 1888, when there seemed to be a chance for electing some of the officers of the territory.

Corruption commenced to creep in; men with unsavory records were employed to defeat the ends of justice; men whose records would put to blush anything that infested the west in early days. Then it was that after the little band of patriots had made it possible to live and have the rights of American citizens, the newcomers, like the vultures and hyenas of the desert, swooped down after the battle had been won to devour the slain.

What has become of the little band of patriots? Most of them have disappeared from the scene. Some few, however, are seen standing on the high plane of honor and honesty, looking down from that exalted position upon the sickening scenes going on below. Some of the old guard have joined the band of the devouring hends, and by every possible means are endeavoring to besmirch and throw filth on those who have taken an honest position. Among those who are wallowing in the filth of the rule or ruin mob, who once stood side by side with us, is that despicable paper, the Daily Tribune. The men who own and are running that paper have been personally acquainted with me twenty-five years, and they know when they say that I have never done a day's work in my life, or that I am not known to them to be a workingman, that they wilfully and maliciously lie. They know they lie when they say that I am now or ever have been connected in any way with Mr. O'Brien. They know they infamously lie when they say I am a sorehead, and mad because I did not receive an office at the last city election.

I say that each and every one of them are liars when they try to lead people to believe that I am influenced by any but strictly honest convictions.

Let a discriminating public judge.

Mr. Lannan, Mr. Goodwin, Mr. Nelson, do you not know that before the registration closed for the February election, that I came to you and told you of felonies and frauds being perpetrated? Did I not plead with you to stand by our old platform and discountenance frauds? Did I not tell you that after making the fight of twenty years, as honorable men, that we could not afford to come into office by fraud? Did you not agree with me that if what I told you was true, that you would oppose it? Do you not know that those felonies and frauds were committed, as I told you? Has there ever been a word, or a line, in the Tribune discountenancing the wrongs perpetrated by the registrars by registering votes in three counties outside of Salt Lake county? Have you ever said anything in opposition to men being registered by proxy? A few days after, did you not labor with me to convince me of my error, and did you not say you had as much right to commit a fraud as the Mormon people? Did I not tell you then and there that it mattered not what the Mormons had done—that it was ours to do right?

Now, you are well aware that this happened immediately after the first parade, and long before the registration ceased, and before any primaries had been had.

Do you or anyone else know of me doing anything looking towards the nomination for any office?

If you do, please speak out in meeting.

It is not my province now to attack any of the parties who stand to-day upon the carpet-bag ticket. It may hereafter be necessary to do so. I know all of these records. But I will say something for the leaders. A word about this party of carpet-bagers, corruption, crimes and concentrated cussedness. It was conceived by an unscrupulous scrub from Michigan, and taken up by a howling mob of genuine carpet-baggers; honest citizens were dazed by red fire, and in the excitement, believing it was an honest move, they yelled "hurrah." The red fires have died out, men's reasons have returned. They see the corruption and deformity of this monstrous organization, and I do not believe they will support the party.

The reasons besides those given above for my opposition to this carpet-barty are as follows:

I am opposed to hiring corrupt politicians to devise felony and fraud. Some of these felonies are as follows: The central committee sent a car through three counties to register voters for Salt Lake city. Those illegal voters' names still remain on the books of the Second precinct, unless removed recently. This is no "Bonfield-Mormon" lie. The Tribune gang knows it to be a fact, for I informed them long before Bonfield was known to be in the city. I know and can prove that men were registered and voted who never saw a registrar or took an oath. I know that men were registered who had not acquired a residence in Utah. I know of men who were not allowed to register who possessed every qualification and right that I do—only that they were suspected of voting the People's ticket. I know that the registration officers have acted in the most barefaced and unconscionable manner. I know that everybody who did not fall in with the carpet-bag steal has been classed with Mormons and ostracized. I know and can prove by a Senate document that one leader is a scoundrel. I know that all the leaders of the carpet-bag party have many unsavory records.

I know that one of the central committee is desirious of going to Congress.

Gentlemen of the Liberal party, how is his record?

Can you, my old friends, see by this statement why I am here, and fighting the carpet-bag party?

Gentlemen, you said during the canvass for the February election, that anyone who dared to vote any but the carpet-bag ticket should be drummed into the People's camp to the tune of the rogues's march. I was not drummed into the People's camp by that tune, but I went out a free man, when you insulted "Yankee Doodle" and desecrated "Sherman's March to the Sea." In one of your resolutions in the last convention you said that anyone who votes any but the carpet-bag ticket should be sent out with the brand of Cain upon him.

Gentlemen, I will take the brand.

S. H. GILSON.

MR. LANNAN'S EDITORIALS.

He Is Not Working for the Good of the People, But for Selfish Ends.

To the Editor of THE HERALD.

I want to call public attention to several thoughts that have been suggested by reading the editorials of Mr. Lannan in the Tribune of yesterday.

The anti-Mormon element is Christian. It contains a conglomeration of material running from Catholicism down to theosophy. It is mongrel from end to end. The infidel is hitched with the Methodist and the Presbyterian, but it is all Christian. That is, the Christian churches lead the anti-Mormon forces and declare that they will vote for none but Christians. The alleged "Liberal" party takes its medicine from the spoon of priestcraft, as represented by Catholic and Protestant priests. These two bodies represent a power almost infinitely greater and more dangerous than the Mormon priesthood, even supposing the latter to be inimical to the government, which it is not. In so far as the anti-Mormon element has obtained control of Utah, it has simply put the Christian priesthood in place of the Mormon. Now, hierarcy or theocracy is the same everywhere. Under different names it is ever the same. If the Mormon priesthood controlled the votes of its people, as is charged, the Christian priesthood does the same thing. On every side can be heard the crack of the Christian whip flogging the non-Mormon people into line to vote the "Liberal" ticket of the Christian priesthood. But the latter has done nothing since it got into power to warrant the belief that it will or can do better than the Mormons did. All the public improvements made in Salt Lake were begun by the Mormons. Of the many promises made by the Christian priesthood political party the only one carried out is sprinkling the streets, but even that is done by men imported to swell the voting list and even the work itself has been possible only because nature gave us more snow last winter than for years. The new priesthood control has not secured one drop more water for the city than the Mormons had. The new hierarchy has rewarded its men by creating offices and salaries, and it has given to corporations of its henchmen the public streets even against the protest of citizens. It has given away more of the public funds for celebration in six months than the Mormons did in forty years. If, now, the rule of priesthood is wrong what better are the conditions under christian than Mormon rule? It would be well for the working classes to think this matter over and on Monday elect the ticket that represents neither Mormon nor christian priesthood, the Independent Workingmen's ticket.

It sounds strange to hear Mr. Lannan, a devout Christian, belaboring in his paper, with the language of the gutter-scribe, men whose only offense is that they are to exercise the right of free men and vote as they see their duty to themselves. It only shows that Mr. Lannan's paper is not working for the good of the people, but for the spoils of office. Mr. Lannan's paper is not the tribune of civilization, but of a ring of scrub politicians and priests who, having pestered out in the east, find pasture in Utah, and can only insure a continuance of their support as beggars and suckers by keeping up the cry that Mormons are disloyal. If the Independent Workingmen do their duty they will teach Mr. Lannan's Billingsgate sheet that it does not own them, if it does carry the supreme court, the governor and all federal officials in Mr. Lannan's trousers—a rather murky place in such weather as we are having.

I notice that $10,000 Powers was preaching at Bingham Wednesday night and tried his tongue again on the bible. There is an old saw to the effect that when the devil quotes scripture folks had better keep their hands on their pocketbooks. The high priced fellow has evidently heard that the Senate document that pulled him down from the coveted judgship in Utah has reached this country. He attempted to forestall it by threatening to put everybody in the penitentiary who should circulate it. That is pretty good evidence that the document contains damaging facts. This campaign will be the last of Mr. Powers as a political leader in Utah. The christian priesthood party cannot carry him. It was he that caused the formation of the Independent Workingmen's party.

Mr. Lannan's editorial on Mr. Wellock's remark about the Tribune at the Clift house meeting is characteristic of the ungrateful fellow. It was this same Wellock who made Mr. Lannan's countryman, Dennis Kearney, and gave California the best constitution among the states. It was Wellock who started the investigation that drove two of San Francisco's city officials to suicide. Is Mr. Lannan fearful that Wellock may do the same thing here by starting an investigation of the anti-Mormon ring? It looks a bit that way. Mr. Lannan calls Wellock a "dog" in his editorial, and says he ought to be in a chain gang. Only last winter Mr. Lannan was glad to have the aid of this man. Wellock never made himself a bankrupt to evade payment of an honest debt as Mr. Lannan's creatures have done. He was never dog enough for that.

Mr. Lannan's paper has much to say about the excellence of its Christian-priesthood $10,000-man's convention. How many thousand dollars did McCallum get for setting out to slaughter Kimball and nominate Page? The trick that threw Connor overboard when the convention had him morally nominated was a bit of chicanery worthy of Tammany in the days of Tweed. Connor! Page! Look on this picture and on that! Eagle and mudhen. Page rode into place on what I believe to be a lie. He attempted to rob Phil. Sheridan, in his grave, of the glory of his immortal ride. Sheridan made that ride alone and was alone when he met his fleeing troopers. Alone he rallied them and turned defeat into victory. If the Independent Workingmen do their duty they will send Page riding up salt river.

POLITICS VS. REALTY.

Trying to Scare the Real Estate Agents to Divy Up.

TWO SOLID TO BE DISTURBED.

Judge Colborn's Silly Prediction That the Election of the Liberal Ticket Meant $10,000,000 to Salt Lake.

It was not the intention of this department to dabble in politics, but in so far as certain statements are being made by prominent dealers that real estate will go to the dogs unless politics take a certain turn, it is eminently proper to disarm these alarmists on that score.

The most irrational statement made by any of the alarmists was that of Judge Colborn, in which he predicted that a Liberal victory meant $10,000,000 to Salt Lake.

There is no question but that the big predictions and great expectations of phenomenal results following the February election had much to do with the wild boom that precipitated prices beyond a normal advance. The wild enthusiasts promised more than they performed, and the reaction which set in during the last few months is the earnest of the initiation. Had the prices not been forced by the wildcat boomers who cared nothing for the future, real estate would have continued to gradually advance, giving the dealers an opportunity to close out their holdings at any time at a legitimate profit. Instead of this the values were in many cases quadrupled in a few months, and as a result the investor must wait until the present building boom has sufficiently matured to realize on his investments.

But the damage done by the Liberal enthusiasts was in placing such high values on property that capitalists who came to the city for the purpose of investing were kept from doing so on account of these high values. Had Judge Colborn said that the February election cost the city of Salt Lake $10,000,000 by inflating values and shutting out legitimate investors he would have come nearer to the facts. Men who come to Salt Lake do not care a fig who records their deeds or sits on coroner's inquests.

They examine values and compare them with prices in cities of like population and if the figures are too high they go elsewhere. There was scarcely a day but that investors who came here to invest in land and buildings went away disgusted. While it is the opinion of conservative investors that Salt Lake property is more valuable than that of any other city of similar population—as its future is more promising—yet, the investor likes to have the benefit of part of the prospective advance. There is, however, no cause for alarm as there is but a small part of the property that will not command all that was paid for it, and a great deal will bring a good profit. Those persons who look well into the future will not fear but that Salt Lake will have 150,000 population in a few years.

Its real estate is on too firm a basis to be greatly affected by the contingencies of local politics.

Any person who says that the election of either ticket will affect values to any great degree must think that real estate is a very buoyant commodity, and without any intrinsic value. A safe, conservative government has certainly a great bearing on values, but elections occur at such frequent intervals that it would be very inconvenient to have the bottom fall out because John Jones got one vote less than Tom Pepper.

It was a combination of natural and acquired advantages that made Salt Lake what it is. In this respect it is like a great many other cities. It is not the exception. Cities in Washington territory have had a more phenomenal growth. The largest cities had a steady growth. Cities are not built in a day and Chicago was not the result of a year's boom. The best evidence that Salt Lake will be a great city is its gradual conservative advance. If it had not been for the solid good sense of the old conservative citizens in demanding one-half cash on all property sold, the boomers would have played havoc with the town. There is a dangerous element that would pick the town up by the tail and shake it for its contents, gather up the lucre and fly away, without any concern as to the flatness of things after their departure.

Water Works Sullivan.

Dennis Sullivan, the Denver capitalist who is at the bottom of the water works syndicate in which several Salt Lake men are interested is in the city looking up the chances for capturing the city council. His presence here on the eve of the election is omnous of the interest that schemers take in local politics.

Bridge Over City Creek Canon..

Says E. L. Crow: "My proposition for a bridge over City Creek cañon to connect the North Bench and the capitol grounds continues to attract the lively attention of property owners in that section and the prospects are all right.

Some few people want to know what good they will get by it, but they seem to see it after a little talk. My explanation is just this:

Here is an impassible chasm, separating two fine residence parts of the city. On the west side the city realized $250,000 for what was sold. On the east side the area improved will be greater in extent and probably worth still more. However, say $500,000 worth of property in all is waiting for a $10,000 bridge. Why an assessment of only 5 per cent on the property would bring in $25,000, and the very day the bridge is assured, up goes the value of all this property perhaps 50 per cent. Talk of snaps, this is one suze.

The city will undoubtedly soon grade the approaches to Capitol hill, and then the approach to the upper north bench will be via Main or State and over this bridge. This route will become the "scenic" pleasure drive. A car line could make big money over this route, work excursion business at once as the distance is so short. I have good reason to believe the city will help us out in this thing as soon as we get together. The council is reasonable enough to see that some share of the $300,000 realized from the sale of lands in those wards should be returned in improvements. We don't intend, however, to leave the matter with the city, as their hands are already full in many directions.

BUT ONE SURE AID,

Clogged Kidneys, Sluggish Liver.

and inactive bowels, speedily manifest in the vitiated and innutritious blood how far impaired are the vital organs, each of which, while seriously affecting the others, is in itself reacted upon disastrously, either directly or through the blood, by all the rest. Medical science is infinitely richer in the nomenclature of the diseases thus induced than in medicines for their cure. There is indeed but one preparation that can be relied upon to act certainly and speedily for the restoration to health and that is Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. In a vast number of cases it has effected cures of the most obstinate and dangerous diseases—particularly those of the kidneys and liver—where all other treatment had proven valueless. For sale by Z. THE AGONY IS OVER.

The County Board Will Hear No More Complaints.

JUDGE BARTCH ON REDUCTION.

He Is Followed by Smith and Howe, Who Go Him One Better—Some Complaints.

The agony is over.

At least in so far as the dear public is concerned.

The dear creatures representing the various abstract companies, who have for so long illumined the probate and county court rooms with their presence, but who were unceremoniously bounced by Judge Bartch in order to make room for taxpayers with grievances, may now return to their old haunts, and the halls and nooks and corners will take on a deserted look.

Although the hearing of complaints has been closed, the work of the board is not by any means over. On Wednesday next, at 10 a.m., they will commence the consideration of the list of protests filed, and which have not yet been acted upon.

There are some knotty problems to be solved, some very peculiar ideas to unravel.

THE WILLIAMSON ESTATE.

As executors of the estate of J. M. Williamson, Boyd Park and Joseph R. Walker protested against the tax on the property of the estate, which this year amounts to $240.33, as against $85.70 a year ago. This they say is an advance of 300 per cent., besides being onerous and unequal, for the reasons that the property is about all there is to support the widow (who is an insane person) and her sister (who is an idiot), while in their opinion, if proper justice were done, they would be supported at the charge of the county and territory.

They ask in view of the above that the tax be remitted. The valuation was not reduced, but the board will consider the question of remitting.

MR. CARTER PROTESTS.

W. A. Carter protested against his assessment of $3,000 on block 190, plat D, which he was willing to sell for $1,400. He also asked that the assessment on some lots in Ehrich's subdivision be reduced from $6,000 to $2,500.

THE BURNED OPERA HOUSE.

Joseph R. Walker and M. H. Walker, executors of the estate of S. S. Walker, deceased, make a general protest, and ask be remitted. They consider that they are that the taxes on the burned opera house not equally assessed with other property holders; that the tax is a burdensome one and totally uncalled for under the circumstances; that it is out of all proportion with last year's.

HE IS TOO RICH.

M. H. Walker also objects, and thinks he is assessed as being $87,900 richer than he was last year.

A PECULIAR CASE.

Jos R. Walker believes that he is assessed 39,500 in excess of last year, and concludes as follows: "We ask your honorable board to make a fair and equitable adjustment of the same, and would respectfully suggest that your honorable body take the necessary steps to make a fair and equitable adjustment of a grievous tax if you have to cause the rate per cent. to be cut down, say to three to four mills on the dollar, in place of seven mills, as I presume you cannot go beyond the law, to reduce the cash value of the property. I believe that by doing this you will avert inevitable law-suits to settle the same."

Just what Mr. Walker means by the above suggestion, that the tax be cut down from seven mills to three or four, is hard to understand. It may be that he has an idea that the county tax is 7 mills; if so, he is greatly mistaken, for it is two mills. If, on the other hand, he is aware of the fact that the entire tax is 7 mills, then is he equally mistaken in supposing that the county has a right to fix a territorial tax.

JUDGE BARTCH'S IDEAS.

The last complaint having been heard—a lady who said she was really unable to pay the tax; who said she was not a widow, "but just about as good, as her husband had been very ill for a long time." Judge Bartch coughed and said he had watched the proceedings of the board with considerable interest; that the assessor had been honest in making the assessments, that he had done good work—as good as any man could have done under the circumstances—he had no fault to find with the assessor—but really, it did seem to him as though the assessment on real property was too high. He did not know how the other members of the board would view the matter, but individually, it struck him that the right and proper thing to do under the circumstances would be to reduce the assessed valuation about 10 per cent. He thought this because he had made comparison with other counties. He had no motion to make, but merely threw this suggestion out as a feeler.

Judge Smith was rather inclined to the belief that the personal property should be included as well, but Judge Bartch begged to differ.

Judge Smith then saw Judge Bartch on the first proposition, and sent him one letter by saying that if it could be done lawfully he would favor a general reduction of from 15 per cent. to 20 per cent.

Selectman Howe, said, "Me, too," and the board adjourned until Wednesday next at 10 a. m.

IS HE THE COMING MAN?

James Corbett, Who "Knocked Out" Kilrain and Longs to Try Sullivan.

Since the day when James Corbett's big fist left its mark on Jake Kilrain's face one man's stock has been going down and another's has been steadily climbing upwards.

JAMES CORBETT.
[From The Police Gazette.]

Whether it will continue to climb or suddenly come to a stop depends to a great extent on the present champion, John L. Sullivan. The ruling question at present is: "What is Corbett's position with reference to Sullivan?" Corbett evidently feels confident of his position, for he has not only offered to meet the champion, but to best him in four rounds or forfeit the entire receipts. This is a ridiculous offer, for the man never lived who could down John L. in four Queensberry rounds.

The admirable likeness of Corbett which is given with this sketch is taken from The Police Gazette. It shows him in fighting trim. He was born in San Francisco Nov. 6, 1866. When 14 years of age he entered a banking establishment, where he remained six years. At the age of 20 he was the amateur champion heavyweight boxer of the Pacific slope and a member of the Olympic Athletic club. Many inducements were held out to him to become its instructor, but he hesitated to become a professional.

However, the big salary finally won him over, and he resigned his position of bookkeeper in the Nevada bank and accepted the office. As a professional he has met and defeated fifteen men in finish fights. He defeated Joe Choynski, the well known heavyweight, on four occasions. His fight with Billy Wilson raised him another notch, and his easy victory over Kilrain established his claim to championship honors.

A Woman's Dream.

On Warren avenue, in Chicago, lives a good old lady at the home of her only son, a business man in fairly comfortable circumstances. This is the story the old lady tells:

"It was twenty years ago. We lived, my husband and I, with the children, on a little farm near the Wabash river. My husband went away with the wheat one April, hauling all he had to sell in the big wagon. He was to be back Saturday night, and I sat up for him. The children had gone to bed, but I had a little supper all ready for him, and sat before the fire knitting. It was away past midnight, and I was so drowsy I finally went to sleep in the rocking chair. The night was pretty chilly, and I seemed to feel the cold.

"Presently I dreamed I was about my work, shivering, when I heard my husband throw an armful of wood in the box behind the stove, and I thought, 'Now I can have a fire.' I turned to speak to him, but he was gone, and while I wondered how he could have put down the wood and gotten away so soon I heard another sound like wood falling in a box, though no one was near it. Then I waked up. The fire was out and the clock showed it was two hours past midnight. I was a good deal worried, but went to bed. Next morning they brought my husband's body home. He had been struck and killed by the night express while crossing the track on his way home, and his watch showed that the awful accident had happened at just 2 o'clock."—Chicago Herald.

How to Speak Japanese.

Japanese seems to be a tolerably easy language to learn, after all. The following, under the heading of "The Japanese Language in One Lesson," is from The Japan Herald: "'Arimas' means everything. 'Arimasen' means nothing. 'Wakarimas' means to understand in all its moods, tenses, persons, etc. It is a whole conjugation in one word. 'Wakarimasen' is the opposite of 'Wakarimas.' 'Dekimas' means unlimited potentiality, past, present and future, and
