

The AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE of Utah

Offers Exceptional Opportunities for People to Improve Themselves During the Winter Months

AGRICULTURE.

The winter courses given at the Agricultural College begin January 8th. From the number of inquiries already received, this year's attendance promises to be the largest in the history of the institution.

The work of these courses in Agriculture extend over a period of three weeks. There are no entrance examinations or other educational requirements, the course being open to all above sixteen years of age. Expenses are very low. The entrance fee is only $2.50, the same as to all the other Winter Courses, and board and lodging can be had for $3.50 to $4.00 per week.

All subjects discussed will be given in lecture form, each lecture being intensely practical, and hence applicable to every-day farm practices. Such subjects as stock judging, stock feeding, creamery practice, treatment of the most common diseases among farm animals, the control of insect pests, proper methods of caring for orchards, irrigation and drainage, field crops, poultry problems, will be taken up, together with such other questions as might be deemed practicable.

The winter course students will receive the benefit of the excellent equipment with which the College is provided. On the farm there are three live-stock barns, piggery, poultry house, green houses, and a veterinary hospital, all of which are strictly modern.

There is also a well-equipped soil laboratory, and an agricultural museum, which contains an extensive collection of grasses, grains, seeds, etc., that will be used in connection with the discussions on field crops.

The courses have been specially arranged for the accommodation of farmers who cannot attend college for a longer period of time. The experience gained and the practical instruction received will much more than compensate for any sacrifice to attend. From $18.00 to $20.00 will cover all expenses aside from railroad fare.

have found it possible to attend school for twelve weeks during the winter months when their work is suspended. Many older men, too, desire to gain some mechanical knowledge that will help them in their work. To the surprise of those who instituted preparation of some fancy dishes. The cooking and serving of a three course lunch is an interesting feature of the work. The daily lecture that precedes the practice lesson treats of the composition of foods, their intrinsic value and the general principles underlying all cookery. The lecture makes clear the "reason why" of the methods taught in the practice class.

In the sewing room all kinds of hand and machine stitches are taught together with the making of dainty muslin underwear. Draughting and dressmaking are taken up as the pupil is prepared for the work.

If the young woman is earnest and industrious she can, even in this brief time, gain enough of these homekeeping arts to add greatly to her happiness and usefulness.

COMMERCE.

The State of Utah has recognized that business in the widest sense is the dynamic force of modern civilization; that the farmer and mechanic as well as the merchant and banker, must co-operate toward advancing the common good and that all the industrial classes who assist in supporting public educational institutions should be represented in these institutions. "Utah's Great Industrial School" offers as complete a course in commercial branches as it does in Agriculture, Mechanic Arts or Domestic Arts.

If you want a good course in elementary bookkeeping, commercial law, penmanship, or letter-writing—subjects you need every day of your life—take the Winter Course in Commerce at the Agricultural College. It will cost you very little more to live in Logan than at home.

Ask former students how they like the course.

MECHANIC ARTS.

For several years past the College has offered twelve weeks' courses in Carpentry and Forging, beginning immediately after the Christmas holidays. A certain class of young men whose duties are such as to require their presence in the beet fields or in the canyons or elsewhere during the late fall and early spring, this work, and to the credit of the classes of men referred to, the Winter Courses in Mechanic Arts have been accepted as an opportunity to do consistent and systematic work. The College has found it necessary to add to the beginner's course, designated as course "A," course "B" for those who had completed course

DOMESTIC ARTS.

Twelve weeks may seem a short time for a course in Domestic Arts, and yet the course offered at the Agricultural College during the winter months gives the thoughtful young woman a fair degree of proficiency in cooking and sewing.

The instruction offered includes all lines of plain cooking and the

Two Funerals in Wellsville

Joseph Cooper and Isaac Green Laid to Rest. Other News from New Railroad Town.

WELLSVILLE, Dec. 20, 1906.—The funeral services over the remains of Fredrick Cooper were held in the Wellsville meeting house on the 15th. A great many people turned out to show their respect, as he was one of the early pioneers of our town, having come here in the early settlement of Cache Valley. The following brethren were the speakers: Richard Branchley, George F. Phillips, Bishop David Murray, Heber Parker, John Glenn, Councillor Wm. H. Maughan, of the Hyrum Stake, and Bishop Evan R. Owen. The all spoke words of consolation to the bereaved and of the good character of the deceased.

Fredrick Cooper was born at Scholes, Yorkshire, England, 69 years ago. In his early youth he left his native land in company with his parents and came to Utah. Mr. Cooper was an honest man, a loving husband, a kind and affectionate father and a devoted Latter-day Saint, and died in the hope of a glorious resurrection with the just.

The funeral of Isaac Green, who died so suddenly a little over a week ago, was held in the meeting house on Sunday. A great many people turned out to pay respects to his memory, as he was a man that was well known in our community, having been one of the early pioneers of our town. The speakers were as follows: Bishop Edward Grover of Garland, Elder Gregg of Malad, Alfred Grover of Garland, Wm. Willie of Mendon, Joshua Salisbury, Richard Branchley and President Wm. C. Parkinson of the Hyrum Stake. Bishop Owen read a sketch of the life of Elder Green, written by himself. All the speakers were well acquainted with him and testified to his honesty and of his integrity for the truth.

Isaac Green was born June 13, 1832, near Bristol, England, and joined the church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in 1851; came to Utah in 1857 and to Wellsville in the early sixties, where he has lived ever since. Elder Green was a man of God, a true Latter-day Saint and died in the hope of a glorious resurrection with the just.

Mr. Joseph Gunnell and Miss Alice Redford were married in the Logan temple yesterday, and a swell wedding reception was given them last night.

The schools had a grand time in the pavilion on Monday night. Our pupils are doing fine under the able management of Principal George Harding.

Elder Joseph Green has returned from a very successful mission in California. It was a sad home-coming, as he did not know of the death of his father until he got to Salt Lake City. He got here for the funeral.

Roller Skating.

The roller skating craze that has caught every other city and town in the country has Logan thoroughly within its grasp. During the past few weeks the local rink has been crowded each evening and throughout the day many beginners may be found taking instruction. Roller skating is most exhilarating and no sensation quite equals that of gliding through space swiftly on skates. The late roller combinations makes skating easy even for novices, and many in this city are now indulging in the pastime as healthful recreation.

Don't forget that Dunbar Robinson leads them all in quality and price. Neck ties, dress gloves, cuff buttons, suspenders, and a thousand other articles suitable for Christmas presents.

ON LOOKOUT FOR HEIRLOOMS

Articles for Which Pawnbrokers Will Pay Good Price.

A Frenchman of undoubted "blue" blood got stranded in New York. His only possession that could be converted into cash was a ring with an authenticated historic value. He consulted friends as to its most profitable disposition.

"Show it to collectors interested in such things," they advised. "Some one will probably give you a good price for it."

"Take it to a pawnbroker," one wise man suggested. "He will give you twice as much as the average collector."

The Frenchman accepted the advice of all; he visited both collectors and pawnbrokers, but he sold to a pawnbroker.

"I knew you would," commented the man who knew. "There are no people in town who have such a keen scent for heirlooms and other articles with a history as pawnbrokers. They are always on the lookout for such things and they are willing to pay for the romantic associations as well as for the intrinsic value. The average man of that calling is not supposed to have the bump of sentiment very highly developed, but he realizes the possibilities of such a pledge should it remain in his possession unredeemed, and he is willing to secure it at the best possible terms to the customer."

Labrador Spruce.

In the vicinity of this camp we saw some of the largest spruce timber that we came upon in the whole journey across Labrador. Some of these trees were fully 22 inches in diameter at the butt and perhaps 50 to 60 feet in height. These large trees were very scattered, however, and too few to be of commercial value. For the most part the trees that we met with were six to eight, and, occasionally, ten inches through, scrubby and knotted. In Labrador trees worth the cutting are always located near streams in sheltered valleys.—Outing Magazine.

No Model for Him.

Dr. Stephen H. Roblin, pastor of the Columbus Avenue Universalist church, Boston, was calling on an old lady, one of his parishioners, before going away on his summer vacation, when his church is always closed. The old lady evidently does not believe in ministerial vacations, for she said:

"Doctor, remember Satan never takes a vacation." "My dear madam," answered the pastor, "I never did believe in imitating Satan."
