There is Something Radically Wrong with the New Cruiser.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—A Philadelphia special to the Times says: "The impression there is something radically wrong in the construction of the cruiser Columbia, built by Cramps, of Philadelphia, grows stronger every day. The fact that her builders have decided to give her a second trial strengthens the belief. The statement that the machinery did not work smoothly is explained from an authoritative source. On the first trial trip, the assertion is now current, that instead of the Columbia putting back to Philadelphia because of stormy weather, the real fact was after a short spin off the Delaware esplanade she came inside the Delaware breaker with hot journals and one of the engines cracking. An examination discloses not only that the liner is renewed before another trial of the Columbia can take place, but all the piston rods must be overhauled."
