

Uncle Sam Has Put Every American On His Mettle

Our response to his ringing appeal for money will mark us, either as a nation of minute-men or misers.

The patriots of the American Revolution pledged their lives, fortunes and sacred honor to found the Great Republic.

And whenever the Republic has been assailed in the past, Americans have gladly offered up their blood and treasure in sacrifice for its safety.

Not until the present day, have men who call themselves Americans ever stopped to count the cost when their country called for substantial service in its behalf.

The glorious traditions of the Republic are now in our keeping. Whether or not we are true to this sacred trust, still remains to be seen.
