THE HARDWORKING PLOWMAN.

"That's it," said a man who had stopped in the corner grocery store to get three and one-half pounds of granulated sugar. "I'm going home tired. I remind myself of the line:

"The plowman homeward plods his weary way."

"You mean plods his weary way," said the schoolmaster, as he went out of the door with a can of kerosene.

"He meant to quote the line that reads:

"Homeward the plowman plods his weary way."

remarked the village lawyer.

"I meant to quote just what I did quote," said the first speaker, sternly.

"The weary plowman homeward plods his way."

"I understand your quotation," said a man who was sitting on a sugar barrel, "to be:

"Weary lie homeward plowman plods his way."

"You are wrong," said a neighbor, who was inquiring the price of hams. "He said:

"Weary the plowman homeward plods his way."

"Pardon me," broke in a traveling salesman for a sausage house. "If the gentleman intended to quote from Gray's 'Eulogy,' the quotation should read:

"Homeward the weary plowman plods his way."

"Please understand," said the man with the three and one-half pounds of granulated sugar, "that I do not make mistakes in quotation. I have twice said that the line is:

"The weary plowman plods his homeward way."

"I understood you to say," observed another neighbor:

"Homeward the plowman weary plods his way."

"We may easily have been mistaken as to what he said," remarked an elderly man, "but what he undoubtedly wished to say was:

"The plowman weary homeward plods his way."

"That is not what I wished to say, and not what I did say!" retorted the man with three and one-half pounds of sugar for seventeen cents. "I said, and I will stand by it:

"Weary the plowman plods his homeward way."

"Pardon me for butting in again, gents," said the sausage drummer, "but I must insist, as before, that if you would accurately quote the immortal 'Eulogy' the line must read:

"The plowman weary plods his homeward way."

"Gen'm'm," said the village good-for-nothing, getting up from a keg of nails behind the stove, "you're rol-wong—'cuse me, you're all wrong. The quotation is:

"The weary plowman homeward plods his way."

Thereupon they went their ways, every one, even to the last speaker, believing he was right.—Youth's Companion.

THE SILENT H.

An American traveling in the underground of London between Hammersmith and Islington heard the guard call: "Ammer-smith, Ammer-smith!"

Whereupon, being of a humorous turn of mind, he said to the guard:

"You have dropped something."

"What?" said the guard.

"An 'h,'" answered the American.

"Oh, never mind," retorted the guard, "I'll pick it up at Hislington."—Travel Magazine.
