

"I'll Save Tomorrow"
but Tomorrow Never Comes

Yesterday is buried—today is on the wing—tomorrow is but a vision. What you save today—that, and that alone, is worthy of record. Some say they'll save "tomorrow." But, alas, the 'morrow never comes. Today is your golden birthday. Accept it at its face value. Bring in one of those spare "eagles" and open a savings account; $5 added weekly for ten years will net you more than $3,000.

as well to drive out the maes and hop-heads who are existing on the earnings of the poor unfortunates with whom they live. The town is full of them, they are known to the police and there is positively no excuse for allowing them to remain in the city. The attempted murder at the Fish club should be incentive enough for the officials to close the three notorious roadhouses and maybe that will happen, for a week or two and then likely as not, they will quietly open again and continue their traffic until another tragedy makes it necessary to again close temporarily.

It is rather difficult to understand why three men should be allowed to "picket" a man's place of business any more than fifty should, and a business man who is opposed at all to picketing, would be just as willing to have a crowd in front of his place as three.

If there happened to be a smallpox epidemic and those afflicted were put in quarantine with the exception of three who were allowed on the street, that wouldn't lessen the danger would it?

Salt Lake should have a live, energetic Commercial club composed of members with one object in view, namely, civic betterment. That is the main idea of maintaining a Commercial club and there isn't one elsewhere in the country where a large percentage of the members belong because down deep they are figuring that their membership and their work will result in personal benefit or advantage to the business they represent.

In view of the difficulties under which the Commercial club has labored for several years and what amounts to a practical confession that the club is unable to meet its obligations, would it not be a splendid idea to disorganize and start a new Commercial club that would be a Commercial club with the membership limited to the representative men in the community in every line of business, eliminating every Tom, Dick and Harry who might want to join? It is certain that there is plenty of room for a Commercial club here. It is needed and needed badly, but why should it be up to a few staunch citizens and loyal friends of the old club to practically take the support of the institution upon their shoulders in view of the fact that the club is heavily in debt and that it is very doubtful if it can be put on a solid basis even through the voluntary efforts of the gentlemen who met for the purpose of ratifying the action of the board on Monday?

In a reorganization, such as has been outlined by numerous members, the building could be rented, or some other place could be found, and with a fresh start in the right direction, there is no question but that the club would have strong support from the best men who are in it now and from many who have resigned during the past two or three years. It could be put strictly on a business basis with all extravagance a thing of the past and could be broad enough to unite all factions with the only proposition in view, the making of a greater and finer city.

People who are paying ten dollars a month or even five, are not getting their money's worth. They are doing it in most cases because of their patriotism and love for the institution which meant so much to them in the past and which could be made as it was in the beginning through a careful and conservative plan of reorganization.
