

CITY COUNCIL TO APPEAL CASE

collector of the old accounts for light and water showed receipts amounting to $218.

Quite a number of complaints against sign boards and billboards on the sidewalks were made. The marshal was instructed to keep the walks clear from all such obstructions.

A lengthy communication from Engineer Richard H. Lyman of Salt Lake pertaining to several systems of water filtering was read. No definite action was taken in regard to it.

The matter of a sidewalk and water line to the cemetery was referred to the street and road committee. Respectful consideration was given to a communication from the chamber of commerce in regard to the proposition and something along this line will probably be done in the immediate future, although the city is not in shape to go to the expense of constructing a cement walk to the burying ground.

Extensive sewer extensions on Seventh and Ninth streets and the extension of water mains on various streets and the expense of paving crossings, culverts, etc., ran the bills up very high and will require every cent of the available resources to meet these increased expenditures.

W. F. OLSON EXAMINED

W. F. Olson, former mayor of Price, believes that gambling should be stamped out. Mr. Olson so stated in the course of his examination touching his qualifications as juror in the Kelter case. He also stated that if it was shown that gambling was conducted in any of the saloons of Price during the time that his administration countenanced it, he would have no hesitancy in removing Mr. Kelter as sheriff for failure to perform his duties in closing it up.

It was rather a bad fifteen minutes that Price's former mayor (who ran a very wide open town) spent under fire from Sam King, a lawyer from the suburbs of Salt Lake. For some reason Mr. Olson gave the impression that he was very desirous of being a juror in the case and his statements that he was against gambling caused broad smiles on the faces of the rather large and audacious and one or two who smiled too loudly were reprimanded by the bailiff.

In answer to a question from Mr. King as to the exact time he had come to the conclusion that gambling was an evil and should receive the censure of all right minded people, whether before or after the last municipal election, Mr. Olson thought that the reform idea had occurred to him about a year ago, which statement also seemed to strike the birth spot of those present.

The defense exhausted its first peremptory challenge in advising the ex-mayor that he would not be imposed upon to the extent of having to sit in judgment upon the county peace officer.

INDIANS EXERCISE CUNNING AND HOLD THE SUN DANCE

The White River Utes and Uncompahgre Indians of the Uintah Indian reservation held their sun dance on the reservation premises, despite the ban which Cato Sells, Indian commissioner at Washington, recently placed on this form of religious ceremony, resulting in an order to all Indian agents and United States marshals to stop the dance.

Learning that Cato Sells had given orders prohibiting the sun dance, more than 200 members of the Ute and Uncompahgre tribes resorted to subtle tactics. Though they appeared to be assembling near Vernal on their old dance grounds, the Indians cultivated an impression among authorities that they would not hold their sun dance until August. Then they began leaving their old dance grounds, but in company with a secret understanding they scattered in groups and proceeded to an uninhabited section of the reservation.

The plot is said to have been designed by "Red Cap," son of "Old Walker," one of the most famous chiefs of the White River Utes, to whom the history of the state devotes several pages. "Red Cap" was renown about eight years ago when he instigated a revolt on the Uintah reservation and led his tribe to South Dakota. Federal troops had to escort the tribe back to the Uintah reservation. In his determination to hold the sun dance regardless of orders, "Red Cap" is said to have been assisted by "Red Dog" and "Coyote Ben," two other leaders of the Uintah reservation, the latter being connected with the Uncompahgre.

COURT OVERRULES DEMURRER

Leave On City Plant Without Vote Held Void.

In the matter of the case of E. H. McDonald against the city of Price and J. H. Manson, plaintiff took the first heat Monday morning. The demurrer interposed by the defendants was overruled by the court. Stanley Price represented the plaintiff and City Attorney McWhinney and Ferdinand Erickson the defendants.

The action was based on a statute of 1913, which, in the words of Judge Erickson, was not "happily worded." The court, however, held that he believed the intent of the statute was sufficiently plain that the city council had no authority to lease the plant without a vote of the people.

Defendants' attorneys contended that the statute was ambiguous and that it would be impossible for a city council to lease municipal property under its terms; that, under section 1, the council would first have to decide that it wished to sell the plant and then pass a resolution that it did not wish to sell but wished to lease and that under section 3 it would be necessary for a lessee to pay the full appraised value of the plant together with all outstanding indebtedness on the bonds and accrued interest. Relying upon a statute of 1911 the attorneys for the defendants claimed the city council had full power to lease the plant.

HERBER RUSSELL KILLED

Herber Russell of Nine Mile met with a shocking death in the local freight yards Monday morning by being thrown under a freight train. The wheels severed the body into four pieces, crushing the features beyond recognition.

He had come to Price with a bunch of sheep which had been loaded for Kansas City. He thought the train was pulling out and as he was to accompany the sheep eat he attempted to board it but missed his footing and was thrown underneath.

The deceased was only 30 years of age and leaves a wife and four children. Interment took place here yesterday, services being conducted from the tabernacle.

Advocate Case Goes Over.

The editor of The Advocate went up to Sunnyside Tuesday to make arrangements for the attendance of his witnesses in the libel suit against this paper by Geo. N. Hill, to learn upon his return that the case by an order of the court had gone over until the October term. This matter was set for trial by jury immediately following the McWhinney case. Judge Christensen stated that it would be impossible to hear more than two jury cases, those of Hill against Kelter and McWhinney. It will therefore probably be the first jury case to be reached during the October term of court.

Fair Opening.

This question is from a Connecticut woman's dairy, dated 1790: "We had roast pork for dinner, and Doctor S., who carved, held up a rib on his fork and said, 'Here, ladies, is what Mother Eve was made of.' 'Yes,' said Sister Patty, 'and it's from very much the same kind of critter.'"—Christian Register.
