PEET RETURNS FROM AN INSPECTION OF THE MINES
J. E. Pettit, state coal mine inspector, returned from an inspection trip through the mines of Sunnyside and Carbon counties to Salt Lake City last Wednesday. Pettit says the mines, with the exception of those at Sunnyside, where coke is made, are running only about half shift at present, on account of the falling off of the demand for coal.

With the advent of warm weather less coal is used, and the Utah product is not exported in any considerable degree. Then again, Inspector Pettit says, the electrification of railroads and other industries also reduces the demand for coal, as well as the installation of gas and electric ranges in homes.
