MUCH INTEREST IS SHOWN IN THE WORK

EMERY IS ALIVE TO FARMERS' ORGANIZATIONS.

Prof. Wallace Sullivan Gave Folks Together at Cleveland, Emery and Elmo—Funeral Services Held For Mrs. James A. Hayward, Formerly of Price—Personal and Social.

CATTLE DALE, Jan. 11.—With farmers' organizations portended in two of the towns of the county and others promised as soon as the necessary meetings can be held, the agricultural interests locally seem about to be united for the good of all—a condition that has been a long time in its accomplishment, but which will be of never ending benefit to the business and agricultural interests of the "Kingdom of Emery" if the idea is carried out to its full extent and the organizations kept fully alive to the problems confronting the farmers, which latter fact is assured with the multitude of similar organizations all over the state, all working toward a common end—the placing of the farmer and the farmer's problems on such a plane where the recognition may be had. A meeting big meeting was held at Cleveland, Wednesday night, attended by nearly a hundred interested men and women who reviewed the idea of organizing with the greatest enthusiasm. A full-fledged organization was perfected there in almost no time, some of the most well-known men in the whole community being selected as officers of the new club. A short program was rendered in conjunction and the gathering was addressed by Prof. Wallace Sullivan, county agricultural agent. The officers selected are Joseph Potter, president; William B. Stokes, vice president; William J. Lamph, secretary; and S. C. Evanson, director. The latter will represent the local club on the county farm bureau. The second meeting of each month was decided upon as the regular meeting night, and the first subject to be taken up will be the federal farm loan act. It is likely that this subject will also be the first to be taken up in all the different clubs throughout the county. Thursday night Professor Sullivan met with the farmers of Emery and a similar organization was perfected at that place. There were not quite so many out at the Emery meeting as there were at Cleveland, but this is partly accounted for by the fact that the meeting was held on a Sunday evening. The lack of attendance, however, was more than made up for by the enthusiasm of those who were present. Several excellent addresses were rendered and Principal Potter of the district school had a good representation of his students present and they proved to be most attentive to the work of the meeting. The officers selected are: Heston Johnson, president; Charles Worthington, vice president; I. A. Patten, secretary; and A. W. Anderson, director. The third meeting of each month was selected as the regular meeting night. Another meeting was scheduled for Elmo last night and one of the biggest meetings yet held was anticipated as there seems to be a great deal of interest taken in this movement. Business men and farmers alike are invited to be present and take part in the organization, as are the women folks and the young people. The movement is one in which all will benefit and the more support the proposition receives at the inception the more good it is possible to accomplish.

The husband and his father, who accompanied the remains here as also did Miss Angie Seely, sister to the deceased, who was visiting with the latter at the time of her death. The services were presided over by Counselor Carl Holt, the ward clerk, under the direction of Hector T. Evans, always a beautiful selection. The funeral also was a solo, Elder John V. Jensen, the first speaker, remarked on the faithful service rendered by the deceased in the different ward organizations where she had always been very active since she was a little girl, always being willing to help in any way possible and always with cheerfulness. J. J. Anderson, speaking next, was reminded of the loss of his own daughter, Edna, who was called to the other side while he was on a military tour in Denmark. Miss Edna had the deceased were very intimate and had been associated a great deal together in different activities, and the speaker had certain beautiful opportunities for knowing the deceased. He mentioned the grateful husband and the wife's sisters, friends, and other relatives, then he mentioned the record rendered in the different ward organizations of the deceased through out the world. He mentioned that the deceased was a very good mother, through out her life she was associated with Mrs. Hayward as long as some of the others had and knew good to her and she very faithfully of his acquaintance, and again he thanked her especially for what she had done for the ward. Mrs. Hayward was born May 18, 1839, in Cumberland, Wyo. The eldest of four children of Mr. and Mrs. George Seely, Jr., she was of whom survive her, she grew to young womanhood here, where she was always active in the ward and state, having held various offices in the Young Ladies Mutual Improvement Association and Sunday school organizations. Needless to say, she manifested herself of her duties in a most creditable manner always and made a host of friends by her cheerful disposition. She was offered a position in Price some three years ago and lived there for some time. She was married January 28, 1916, and with her husband located in Cumberland, Wyo., where the latter has employment with the Oregon Short Line. For almost a year their lives together had been everything that could be desired when she was called to give her life in the spring of 1916. The end came, all unheralded, on December 25th, and the remains were brought here for burial in accordance with her expressed wish.

Printing Should Be Judged By Results and Not By Price.

The price "per thousand" does not indicate the value of printing no more than does the price "per suit" indicate the value of clothing. You can buy a suit of clothes for about ten dollars, but if you want a good suit you pay twenty-five or thirty. You might buy a thousand circulars for five dollars—and you probably would be getting what you paid for—but a thousand good circulars, handled by a man who studies the advertising value, and whose aim is to make printing serve its purpose—sell goods—might cost twice that amount or more—and they would be worth the money because the results would be greater—they would sell more goods. This is service in printing—you get it here.

When you send out printing you expect results—you expect to sell goods—and you cannot afford to take chances by sending out poorly gotten up advertising matter, handled on the basis of price "per thousand" and by a house whose sole aim is to "slap it out" and get the money regardless of how much benefit you are going to derive from the work.

The interest of The Sun press doesn't cease with the receipt of an order of printing. Our aim is not merely to procure your order, but to handle it in a way that it will best serve its purpose. We assist you in the preparation of copy, make designs, offer suggestions—give you service—the benefit of years of experience and study of printing and advertising.

SOLDIER'S LIFE TO BE MADE MORE DESIRABLE

NEW ORDER COMES TO THE RECRUITING STATION HERE.

Many Positions Open to Young Men Who Have Ambitions to Serve Their Country in the Army—Three Carbon County Boys and Two From Grand Have Recently Enlisted.

Under an order received this week from the office of H. W. Head, adjutant general of the United States army at Washington, D. C., the Price recruiting office is given authority to accept for enlistment in the quartermaster corps while applicants possessing one or a great number of specified qualifications. Men so accepted, if enlisted, will be held at recruiting depots pending assignment according to their order. Any man who can qualify as a clerk, typewriter, stenographer, chauffeur, blacksmith, baker, carpenter, cooper, cook, engineer, dressmaker, forger, master, horse trainer, laborer, mechanic (auto), overseer of labor, packmaster, painter, packer (cork), painter, plumber, saddler, stable man, storekeeper, school teacher, tinsmith, tool maker, warehouse man, watchman or schoolwright will be accepted for enlistment.

The privilege of retirement in the quartermaster corps is seldom extended through the recruiting stations. An unprecedented number of applicants is expected by recruiting officers at the Utah stations. The range of the invitation is so wide that hundreds of unemployed will be able to choose positions they can fill. Prospective recruits in the quartermaster corps must pass the same thorough physical examination given applicants for admission in other branches of the military service.

Heretofore it was only by special request on the part of a recruiting officer that enlistment could be made for the quartermaster corps. Under the call for increased army strength this branch of the service is facing the necessity of obtaining a great number of men. It was decided that the required number could be secured only by throwing down the barriers and receiving applicants through the regular recruiting service.

These applicants under the new order will be held at Fort Douglas and given permanent assignments during the last few days they have been there, assignments at the Price station, Frank K. Moulton and John S. Elmore, both of Mound, and Clyde P. Davis of Springville. Prospective James Jones of Price and Frank Derick of Winter Quarters stopped up at Salt Lake City for advice with their comrades. Several have already proceeded to Price.
