Greeks Continue to Advance and Nationalist Depression Grows Accordingly

SCHEME TO OVERTURN SOCIAL ORDER SEEN

Assailants Repulsed When Barracks at PISA Are Rushed by Revolutionists

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 28.—(By The Associated Press).—Constantinople is beginning to feel the effects of the Greek advance. The Greek steamer Yachtus has arrived here, having on board sixty nationalist officers captured June 25, and Greek refugees arriving from Rodosto sea ports and the interior villages between Ismid and Constantinople. They report that the Turkish are burning Greek villages and shooting Greek refugees. According to the refugees this is but a forerunner of a general Moslem attack upon the Greeks, which is expected when the news regarding the Greek advance.

The Nationalists of Trebizond province have begun deportation of Greeks into the interior. Extending Movement. The Greeks have landed forces along the Gulf of Saros, will land additional troops at Rodosto sea ports and will begin their movement from Occidental into Oriental Thrace.

The Turks are being evacuated from the shores of the Black Sea to make shipping safe from snipers, and it is expected that a state of siege will be declared at Constantinople to give the entente control of the civil population.

Cabinet Frames Protest. The Turkish cabinet today framed a protest to the entente against the Nationalist occupation of Anatolia while the treaty is pending. Apparently, however, the entente holds that a state of war exists, as represented by the British and French high commissioners visited the Sublime Porte and announced that they would begin putting the treaty terms into effect promptly.

Mustafa Kemal Pasha, leader of the Turkish nationalists, gave his approval to the treaty of Turkey to the allied peace treaty. He recently absolutely refused to surrender Smyrna and Thrace to the Greeks.

Depression Prevails. Depression prevails in Turkish circles over the news that the Nationalists fled in disorder in the first attack against them. The Turkish newspapers do not conceal their fear that the situation is becoming grave owing to the reported heavy losses of the Nationalist bands in the Ismid region, where they are retreating.

Great Rejoicing. There is great rejoicing among the Greeks in Constantinople over the advance of the Greek army west of Ala-Shehr, a walled town, the ancient name of which was Philadelphia. The Greeks report that Turkish losses in the capture of Ala-Shehr as 8,000 men killed, wounded or captured.

Greeks Land Men. LONDON, June 28.—The Greeks have landed a force at Landerma on the south coast of the Sea of Marmora, according to a dispatch from Evening News today from Constantinople. This force is intended to operate southward against the Nationalist forces of Mustafa Kemal Pasha northeast of Smyrna.

Bryan Determined To Get Friends of Rum In Open at Convention

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN. Written exclusively for Universal Service. Copyright 1920 by W. J. Bryan.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—When the convention opens it will be confronted by issues which will for a couple of days overshadow booms for candidates. The issue talked about most is the one involving the prohibition amendment and its enforcement by federal statute. The changes of attitude by the representatives of the Knights of Thirst have been kaleidoscopic in number and variety. If not in spirit, at first we had the cocksure opponents of prohibition led by Governor Edwards and heartily seconded by Governor Smith. Governor Edwards wanted to make his home state as "wet as the Atlantic ocean" and when Dame Fortune landed him in the executive chair he attempted to moisten all adjacent territory. He was emboldened by his lucky strike that he blossomed out into a candidate for president, and the brewers began to beat their tom toms throughout all the swampy sections of the country.

Governor Smith Joins. Then Governor Smith of New York in a burst of enthusiasm denounced prohibition as worse than Prussianism and a Democratic state convention held in New York declared unalterable, if not unimmutably, opposition to the national amendment and pledged the party to nullify by state statute any federal law enforcing it during the time they hoped, short period that might elapse between the date of the convention and the nation's return to the saloons. The men who felt that the right to poison others with alcohol was the only inalienable right guaranteed by the constitution and the right to drink intoxicants the only kind of liberty represented by the constitution, proceeded to tell the Democratic party where to head in on the liquor question. The wet propaganda received copious encouragement from a number of organizations in different parts of the country. Even the supreme court decision did not discourage them. They descended on the convention like an army with banners, foaming like a glass of beer and raising like strong drinks. While there is some rivalry among those who aspire to lead this motley host, the Honorable James Nugent of New Jersey will probably be given the distinction of being flag bearer, his fitness for the place having been attested by his closeness to the New Jersey brewers and by the fact that there is in sufficient number to block an initiative of those whose business it has been for at least twenty centuries to offer the earth to those who will all down and worship the evil one. It is expected, of course, impossible to forecast the exact language of the platform as it will emerge from the committee on resolutions, but I shall submit to the convention for the consideration of the members the following:

It may be stated without fear of successful contradiction that the delegates to the Democratic convention have an opportunity to vote for or against a dry plank. This will give every state a chance to go on record. And, as every delegate has the right to demand a plank, if his delegation, there is no reason why any delegate should lack an opportunity to make his vote known to his constituents or allow his colleagues to vote for him without his consent without identification. In other words, those who want an open platform, should arrive at the convention well equipped with knowledge that their sin will find them out.

Bryan's Dry Plank. Telegrams are coming in from temperance organizations and church bodies, there are in sufficient number to block an initiative of those whose business it has been for at least twenty centuries to offer the earth to those who will all down and worship the evil one. It is expected, of course, impossible to forecast the exact language of the platform as it will emerge from the committee on resolutions, but I shall submit to the convention for the consideration of the members the following:

Black Crime to Defeat Treaty, Keynote Says. President Wilson's two appeals before congress for legislation dealing with profiteering, reduction of taxation, aid for soldiers and law to improve relations of capital and labor were ignored, he declared, and after a year of sterile debate our country has neither peace nor reconstruction.

Attacks on Wilson. He drew his attacks upon the president, Malice then followed him to the peace table, he said, and widespread propaganda made it imperative when he returned from Paris to "make a struggle for that which had been won at incalculable cost. This meant wreck of health, sickness for his children, and a life of worry, the sickness of heart which comes from the knowledge that political adversaries are savagely destroying not merely the work of men's hands, but the world's hope of settled peace. This was the affliction—the crucifixion.

Peace Achievements. The Democratic party has secured freedom from the farmer from the deadening effects of usurious financial control. Labor was given its Magna Charta of Liberty. Business and finance were released from the thralldom of uncertainty and hazard.

The income tax law, he said, "relieved our law of the approach of being unjustly burdensome to the poor. The extravagances and inequities of the tariff system were removed and a non-partisan tariff commission created. A non-American was elected president and the bread that came upon the waters came back to us many fold. Alaska was opened to commerce and development. Dollar diplomacy was destroyed. A corrupt lobby was driven from the national capitol. An effective Seaman's Act was adopted. The federal trade commission was created. Child labor legislation was enacted. The Parcel Post and the Rural Free Delivery were developed. A good roads bill and a rural credits act were passed. A secretary of labor was given a seat in the cabinet of the president. Eight hour laws were adopted. The Clayton Amendment to the Sherman Anti-trust Act was passed, freeing American labor and taking it from the list of commodities. The Smith-Lever bill for the improvement of agricultural conditions was passed. A corrupt practice act was adopted. A well considered warehouse act was passed. Federal employment bureaus were created. Farm loan banks, postal savings banks and the federal reserve system were established.

Federal Reserve System. The federal reserve system, passed over the opposition of the leaders of the Republican party, enabled America to withstand the strain of war without shock or panic and ultimately made our country the greatest creditor nation of the world.

Turning to the record of the Republican congress since 1918, Mr. Cummings said it was a record of shameful, shameless waste of time and money and without parallel for its incompetencies, failures and repugnant.

News of the maneuvering still in progress among the platform makers on the issue of the Indiana delegation to the assembling delegates. It was said that those expecting a hard fight from Bryan on the league of nations plank, were sorely disappointed. Bryan, as Mr. Bryan had drafted a league plank which the administration forces would accept and support. It was also reported that some of the administration leaders that Mr. Bryan would not make any fight for a plank for government ownership of railroads.

Taggart Arrives. When Tom Taggart arrived in the space set apart for the Indiana delegation he got a reception from his own crowd, winding up with three cheers and a tiger.

The Palmer men from Pennsylvania enlivened the proceedings between the band selections with a chorus of songs. Some of the attorney general's supporters in another part of the square, accompanied with a chorus of P-A-L-M-E-R, exactly at 12 o'clock, the hour at which the convention was called to convene the color guard in the opening ceremonies lined up behind the chairman's table. There were two buglers, a color bearer and two waiters. The dress uniforms added another pretty touch of color.

Most of the delegates knew for what purpose the devil dogs had taken post, and their appearance did not cause a stir.

The Palmer delegations seemed to be monopolizing the preliminary demonstrations. Every few minutes a new group of Palmer supporters from some part of the hall where a group waved Palmer flags and pennants. Then it would be answered from a larger group in another corner of the hall while the aisles were becoming crowded but there still were many empty seats.

The galleries particularly had whole tiers empty and a said they were slow in filling because of the close inspection to which all admissions were subjected. There were reports of whole blocks of tickets having disappeared and the convention officials were trying to check up.

A good deal of talk looked as though it would stand under a great deal of gavel punishment had been provided for the convention chairman, but it was not so. In the center of the hall, just out from the front of the platform, looked for all the world like a boxing arena, fenced off with a rope and stanchions. At 20 minutes past 12, platform officials said the delay in starting the convention was due to the confusion around the ticket situation.

Chairman Cummings and other officials of the national committee were in the committee's office back of the main gallery, waiting for the delegates to get the ticket situation straightened.

When the band swung into "I Love You California," the California delegation and spectators let out a roar of applause and cheers. Just before 12:30 Vice Chairman Bruce Kremer of the Democratic national committee got into position at the desk and made the opening remarks. He called to order. Immediately the shrill, clear notes of the marines' bugle rang out through the hall, and the band and the cheering began. The Stars and Spangled Banner. A tremendous American flag rolled up high to the ceiling was unfolded and rolled down in back of the speaker's platform. The singing of the national anthem in the rolling throbbings, notes of the national anthem.

Plaque of Wilson. Then the singing concluded, the flag was rolled up again, disclosing an immense portrait of President Wilson. It was the first for an outdoor occasion of this kind in a rolling platform. The delegates standing on chairs waving flags, shouting and applauding.

Cheers, rebel yells and shouts out from the back of the hall as the band whopped up "Hail to the Chief." When a demonstration had been rolling along for five minutes, Vice Chairman Cummings attempted to bring the convention to order and go ahead with business, but the delegates would have none of it. The applause and cheers kept coming in rolling waves. The great rousing of the gavel was only answered with cries of "Sit down!" and "Hurrah for Wilson!"

Noise Continues. Standards were pulled up from the places marking the delegations on the floor and the demonstrators began organizing a procession about the speaker's desk. The crowd in the main gallery hall when a candidate is being placed in nomination. Mr. Kremer rather gave up the idea of getting the convention in order while it was in the midst of the glory of San Francisco as he smilingly stood at his desk and let the noise go on. After a few more minutes, assisted by the band, the delegates attempted to quiet the tumult and get the convention going. He was only answered by more rolling choruses of shouts of "Hurrah for Wilson!" While the delegates were talking over the noise, the galleries sat in an interested way, but took little part in it. The whooping, roaring delegates parading on the floor, however, drowned out the band at times.

Roosevelt Gets In Bad. While the demonstration was at its height, Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, picked up the standard of the Navy and the delegation and got into the Wilson parade. Other members of the delegation objected and there was a scramble, in which a policeman took the part of the delegation and helped to get Roosevelt. There was a lively scramble for a moment in which Roosevelt went out and went off with the standard, joining the demonstration. He was followed by a black and face for a moment and it looked as if somebody was going to be hurt. As it turned out no damage was done.

More attempts at order and more ear-splitting whackin' of the gavel brought only more cheers. The delegates evidently wanted to demonstrate for Wilson and did not intend to be stopped until they had finished.

At 12:45 o'clock the demonstration began dying away and the vice chairman gave the orders to the sergeants-at-arms to clear the floor.

Mr. Kremer finally succeeded in making himself heard and Monsignor Ryan, vicar general of San Francisco, offered a prayer.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—An innovation for the opening of the Democratic national convention was the singing of the Stars and Spangled Banner instead of the usual pounding with the gavel. A detachment of marines in front of the platform were to raise the national color and present arms while the band played "The Star Spangled Banner."

The arrangement was made by Secretary of the Navy Daniels at the suggestion of First Lieutenant H. Hornbostel, chief of the secretary's personal escort.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—William Jennings Bryan, under the cover of a "wet and dry" contest, has opened a fight upon Senator Carter that has resulted in a sharp rebuff. They stood on chairs and waved their banners, beating time with the music.

CANNOT STAND LONG IN S. F.

Runyon Describes Some of Bay's Attractions to Delegates

By DAMON RUNYON. Written Exclusively for Universal Service. Copyright 1920 by Universal Service. SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—One reason already has been established by this Democratic convention, anyway, less standing around has been done to date than at any other political gathering in years past.

In the first place it is practically impossible to stand around for any length of time, especially in the hotel lobbies, because the congestion is so great that the natural ebb and flow keeps a man moving.

You pick out a nice spot to do a bit of standing around in, and almost immediately you are dislodged by the violent impact of some prominent general, or, in the case of the crowd, by some man from three separate and distinct moorings as follows:

(a) From the cigar counter by Mr. Burleson, the postmaster general.

(b) From the cashier's window by Mr. Ray Baker, the director of the mint.

(c) From the soft drink bar by Riley Wilson, of Charleston, W. Va., a peaceed at Burleson.

Of the three collisions we resented that of Mr. Burleson most. We felt that it might have been due to Mr. Burleson's more or less well known animus towards newspapers, and that he sensed the fact that we have a newspaper enough to tell newspaper people around here. Dumber people than Mr. Burleson find it easy. Every person who isn't a delegate is bound to be a newspaper party.

In the second place, reverting back to this paucity of standing around, there are too many places to see in San Francisco for anyone to waste time standing around.

There are also things to see. In fact the places break about even with the things. Most of the glory of San Francisco may have departed, to hear the graybeards mumble it, but it is still a great old town. Bill Irwin once wrote a story about it in the City That Was. He ought to be here today to write about "The City That Is."

Barbary Coast Dying. Chinatown has faded, and the Barbary Coast is more or less of a memory, but anyone who thinks that there is nothing doing in San Francisco nowadays is, in the classic language of the "roaring forties," full of prunes, California prunes.

Part of the convention evaporated today, although you could scarcely notice it from the hotel lobbies. They were jammed several ways from the back, but even so they leaked out. The face expression of the day before, and last night.

The delegates had taken their wives and gone out to the beaches, or across the bay, or down to the city. This is one of the greatest bring-your-own-wife conventions that the world has ever seen. The ladies add much to the natural color, and beauty of the city. The assemblage is taking on the aspect of a family affair, and naturally the women folks want to see something of this part of the world of which they have heard so much.

The weather has been delightful for the past few days. It has been sunny, set cool enough for comfort. The delegates who have never been here before are so enthusiastic about San Francisco weather that we would be loath to reveal the secret which even wealthy sons of the Golden Gate is carrying long in his bosom.

However, if these delegates keep on inquiring, "Where's that fog, and wind, I heard you had here at this time of year?" if they persist in that query to the extent that they make it appear as though they were inquiring about the advertised weather conditions, why the San Francisco is apt to produce something to that effect before the week is out.

For your San Franciscan is nothing if not hospitable. He strives to please. He has been pouring out sunshine with beautiful hand, feeling that is what the delegates want, but if they are dead set on fog and wind, he will see that they have fog and wind, and maybe a dash of rain or two.

SEE THE DELEGATE AND HIS BADGES

After the political mountain has labored and brought forth a candidate, the delegates will disintegrate and sneak back to the enveloping shadows of home cooking. There will ensue our more lean, starved badgeless years of existence, as delegates if that ain't a badge is an awful thing.

Rob the peacock of his tail, strip the Smith brothers of their whiskers, swindle Woodrow Wilson of his dailies, but don't touch a hair on one of these delegates' badges. Like the crown jewels of the czars, they speak glories of the Democratic past, the anxieties of the present and the hopelessness of the future. Ye a ho.

The convention opens deadlocked. The league of nations is dead and the Democrats are dead. There is a deadlock, then Solomon was a bachelor.

In an extra pink edition, the Police Gazette has come out strongly against Lew Dockstader, so it looks as if the Democratic leaders will have to pick a candidate out of Pantages circuit.

The Hagerstown almanac is non-partisan, but in an impassioned appeal to four taxicab drivers, the editor of Sears, Roebuck catalogue steps out for "Mr. Arnshein for secretary of treasury."

This naturally lies up the tabular statements, sure too, in case the Hawaiian delegates try to stampee the works towards a ukulele player, the Sears Roebuck catalogue will concede nothing, claim everything and demand a receipt. This is one catalogue that is also—on the up and up and totally unsubsidized. With the millions of installment inhabitants in back of it, they can sure make the leaders walk pretty.

It looks from the nickel seats as if the paper battling suit and the carbide suit, that is, the compromise candidate. With Bryan, Wilson and Bill Lyons, the pie-eater piper, all tangled up in a private quarrel in public, there is no way out but by the compromise route.

A compromise candidate is a guy you don't like, but you accept him, if he is a compromise candidate, you know the other guys don't like him either. What could be fairer?

That's the way the works stand now with everybody cutting out paper knives and watching the other party like a bartender piking a hokey inebriated over toward the free lunch counter.

The issue rests on Bill Bryan's opening chorus. Bill is a linguist who speaks from all corners of the mouth and if he happens to accidentally say something sensible there ain't no saying what will happen.

He may grab another nomination for his trophy room and use the answers for a bookmark.

Farmer Killed and Four Men Wounded

DUBLIN, Ga., June 27.—H. E. Jenkins, wealthy farmer and former mayor of Cadwell, twenty miles from here, was killed and four other men were wounded in a pistol duel between members of rival political factions Saturday night, according to reports received today. The wounded include Hiram Mullins, mayor of Cadwell, and C. C. Caldwell, a farmer, neither of whom are expected to live.

Residents of the town said the controversy started seven years ago over the location of the railroad station.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Service men among convention delegates today perfected plans for obtaining the endorsement of the Democratic party for bonus legislation.

Richard Seelye Jones, chairman of the Washington state delegation, Major Bennett Clark of Missouri, son of the late United States court of Representative Champ Clark's old opponent Barry of Tennessee, and E. W. Robertson of Spokane, Wash., were selected to appear before the resolutions committee.

INDIANA WILL PUSH MARSHALL

Vice President Says He Will Do Anything to Aid Democratic Party

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—The Indiana delegation has decided to present Vice President Marshall's name to the convention for president. Mr. Marshall in a speech told the Hoosier delegates they had his consent, although he did not wish to make the fight, even with assurances of nomination, but desired to aid state and national Democracy.

Mr. Marshall said: "I have told Senator Taggart and Governor Ralston and told them truthfully that I had no desire to be nominated for the presidency, that my one political desire was to restore Indiana to the Democratic column; that I was not sufficiently conversant with the situation in Indiana to know what would best aid in bringing about that result. I said if Governor Ralston desired the nomination for vice president I would gladly go down the line for him. Then I said if it would help the Democratic cause in Indiana the delegates had my permission to vote for me in convention for president."

"I repeat that statement to you. I honestly do not want to make the fight, even though I could be nominated, but I do desire to do all I can for the Democracy of Indiana. I do not, however, propose to be charged with bad faith in having secretly sought the nomination. You are free to do as you please, with this one proviso, that you are doing it for the good of the party in Indiana and not for personally, nor at my solicitation."

The Indiana delegation placed the vice president on the committee on resolutions. He is favoring a platform declaration in favor of ratification of the Versailles treaty, including the league covenant, without modifications, but with the proviso that if, after a fair trial of the agreement it should prove to be detrimental to American interests and rights, this country should demand amendments or withdraw. He takes the position that it cannot be determined in advance what, if any, provisions of the covenant will impair American rights, and that the only practical test is a trial of the agreement by actually putting it into operation.
