SON KILLS FATHER FOR BEATING MOTHER MALAD, Idaho, June 23—Harvey Thomas, aged 22 years, shot and killed his father, Dan H. Thomas, at their ranch, eight miles from Malad, Saturday night.

Mr. Thomas was quarreling with his wife and began beating her, it is stated. The son could not stop him, so he ran to the neighboring ranch for help, and, not finding assistance, he returned home to find the father still beating his mother. The boy then shot him with a rifle. The bullet entered below the heart. Mr. Thomas lived a half hour and was conscious most of the time.

When you feel that your stomach, liver or blood is out of order, renew their health by taking BEECHAM'S PILLS

The names of many distinguished members of royal families who have visited the United States were mentioned a few days ago in an Associated Press dispatch, but the greatest of all, from the standpoint of bearing on world history, was the visit of no less a personage than the Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria, whose murder at Sarajevo, Bosnia, on June 28, 1914, was the torch that set the world aflame.

And this man and his wife were entertained by one who is now a citizen of Ogden, J. H. Uhl, a retired livestock man who formerly operated a ranch in the Jackson Hole country and now resides at the Washington hotel.

In an interview, Mr. Uhl told of the Archduke being his guest at the Jackson Hole ranch for a period of thirty-two days back in 1905, nine years before they were ordered as a sacrifice to the war lord's ambition to rule the world, and which event drew from the kaiser of Germany, when he was informed, the expression: "The hour has struck. We shall now see what an army is."

Mr. Uhl stated that the visitors came direct to his ranch from their home in Austria for a hunting expedition, making the Bar-U ranch, Mr. Uhl's place, their headquarters.

"They were among the loveliest people I have ever met," said Mr. Uhl. "Their visit was one of the events of my life that will always remain as a pleasant memory. "The archduke's wife was a vivacious woman, very clever and a good entertainer. She was well informed on many subjects and delighted in conversation. Her husband, on the other hand, was very quiet. Sometimes when his good wife would talk quite a bit, he would speak out in a slow drawl and a slight accent: "My dear, you talk too much with your mouth." And then both would laugh, showing a perfect understanding and harmony between them. I think he really liked to hear her talk, and perhaps he was proud of her ability as a conversationalist.

"These people were always trying to do something for some one else. They seemed very unselfish, and often made gifts to friends. They gave me a number of presents, and some also to my wife, who was living at that time. They came to our place early in October, 1905, just when the hunting season was at its best.

"They didn't get much game. They came to hunt for elk and bear. The archduchess bagged the first kill, getting a fine blue elk not more than a mile from the ranch, the first morning they started out. But they never got a bear. They spent much time around the little lake in that region and brought down many birds of various kinds, which they kept for the purpose of making a study.

"The archduchess was very fond of furs and skins of animals and would often buy them from trappers. I remember that she bought a skunk hide from a young man, paying him $15 for this precious souvenir.

"The archduchess was known as Colorado Mansfield, which they said was a French name adopted for private use. But he went under his own name, and she always spoke to him as 'Ferdinand.' He was one of the nicest men I ever knew in a social way, quiet and gentlemanly at all times and a perfect democrat.

"They did not put on airs at all. After the royal couple returned to their home in Austria, they wrote a number of letters to Mr. Uhl and his wife and also sent photographs of themselves.

"These pictures are somewhere among my effects, I believe," said Mr. Uhl, "but I do not know just where to look for them. I made notations that their lives were destined to have such a bearing on world history."

This visit to the Jackson Hole country was little noted at the time and for this reason the Associated Press may easily have failed to record the fact that they were here.

Streams Lower Now Than in August Last Year

Upon inquiry this morning, W. Preston Thomas, agricultural agent of the Weber county farm bureau, stated that the water supply in this county at the present time is shorter than it was last year in August. While the crops in the county have not as yet been seriously affected by the shortage of water, the farmers are becoming deeply concerned for the future.

Lloyd Loom Is Being Sent to the Australians

MENOMINEE, Mich., June 25.—A one-maned man operating the newly invented Lloyd loom so impressed the Hon. G. M. S. McNeillage, member of the Australian legislature, during a trip through the Lloyd Manufacturing company's plant here that arrangements were completed by cable whereby the Australian government pays $250,000 for rights to use the machine as well as Lloyd's new method of production.

They will only be used in giving employment to returned and crippled soldiers and sailors. The Lloyd loom is the first mechanical device ever made which will weave reed or fibre for baby carriages, furniture or baskets. From the very earliest time—ever—when Moses was found in the bulrushes, tucked into a hand-made reed basket—these articles have been woven by hand. Marshall E. Lloyd, one of the best known American machine inventors, struggled many years over the task while scores of others failed. Success has finally come in a machine which will weave these fabrics thirty times faster than the most skilled hand worker can and with greater perfection. The gap of ages has been spanned in an industrial manner and reed and fibre manufacturers look for a complete revolution in their industry as a result of the Lloyd loom. A machine is now en route to Australia. More will follow soon and a large factory will be built in which returning heroes will be employed. The fact that physically deficient men can do the weaving on the Lloyd loom instead of the most efficient hand workers and that Australia is doing everything possible to aid its wounded prompted the expenditure of one-quarter of a million dollars for a single machine.

MABEL NORMAND AT THE OGDEN IN "THE PEST"

Mabel Normand's newest Goldwyn picture is "The Pest." It comes to the Ogden theatre tomorrow, and it bids fair to cause gales of hearty laughter, with a catch in the throat now and then when the vivacious star becomes wistful and pathetic. "The Pest" is a happy combination of all the elements that go to please the vast majority. Those who adore Mabel Normand will delight in watching the progress of Puckers through a maze of laughable situations which take her from the farmyard to the mansion of the county judge. She is supposedly the daughter of a shiftless couple who impose all kinds of laborious duties on her. One is guiding the primitive ferry which they control, a task which brings about many amusing situations although Puckers' passengers are in imminent peril of more than one ducking.

It is when the girl slips an old ring on her finger and goes to a party that the serious element in the story is first made known. The judge at whose home the dance is given observes the ring and it recalls many things to him. Investigation is begun and before long unmasked and the girl he has regarded as his daughter proves to be in league with those intent on his ruin. Puckers is involved in every stage of the plot.

"SOME BRIDE" GOOD AUDIENCE AT THE UTAH

"Some Bride," with Viola Dana as the star, was shown at the Utah theatre yesterday to large audiences which thoroughly appreciated its fine comedy and delightful acting.

This offering is virtually all Viola Dana—Viola Dana at her cutest and most appealing best. If she doesn't make an audience laugh with and at her antics in this picture it is because there is something wrong with the audience. The film is pure exploitation of the personality of Miss Dana—and the little Metro star scores a hit.

The role that Viola has in the picture is one that gives her particular talents full sway, and she never misses a chance to register. The star is ably aided and abetted in getting over successfully her bag of tricks by the direction, which at all times shows a sense of the value of little things.

Viola is a devilish little imp endowed with those "can't behave" eyes. The action of the first half of the picture is laid during her honeymoon with Irving Cummings at a swell seaside resort, where Irving becomes extremely jealous of the attentions showered on his bride, and in an amusing sequence carries her in his arms from the beach to their hotel as if she were a child.

Then more of Viola's comedy business is pulled in the hotel room, and Viola's manner of cooing Irving's temper and her method in getting him to make up after the rift are really funny. But Irving's blood is aroused indeed when his bride appears in a very bewitching costume at the hotel ball dance, and dances with other men because of Irving's sprained ankle. Irving is real angry this time and leaves his bride at the summer resort. In town he starts divorce proceedings.

Viola is given plenty of further chance for laughs when she pretends serious illness in a hospital, hoping in that manner to bring Irving back to her.

Plot complications come a bit faster in this part of the film, and Viola takes the place of a tired nurse. Irving hurries to the hospital to visit the injured lawyer who has started divorce proceedings, and finds Viola apparently in the arms of Billy Mason. But Irving is glad enough to see his wife alive, and takes her home to their dovecot.

Later they have as their guest Billy. Viola's apparent attentions to the convalescent arouse Irving's jealousy to the extent where he hires a female detective. But his actions prove a boomerang, for through a series of laughable events the whole group "frames" Irving, and in an entertaining manner he is cured of his jealousy.

On the same program was shown Fatty Arbuckle and Mabel Normand in "His Diving Beauty," a rattling good comedy.

Threshermen to Meet in Brigham On Saturday

A convention of threshermen will be held in Brigham City next Saturday. "Dear Sir: Permit me to again call your attention to the convention of threshermen from Morgan, Davis, Weber, Box Elder and Cache counties, to be held at Brigham City, Saturday, June 28, beginning at 10 a. m.

"A meeting of the threshermen from these counties and a discussion of their problems should be valuable to you. Your whole crew should be in attendance, or at least a representative from your company.

Kindly take this matter up with the rest of your boys and make preparations to go to Brigham City on the 28th."

A CORKING GOOD COMEDY DRAMA A Cure for Jealous Husbands and Tired Business Men

"Don't you ruffle my feathers," says Viola Dana in "Some Bride" Starring VIOLA

The story is a sparkling up-to-date comedy showing that a jealous husband has no right to marry a girl with "can't behave" eyes unless he is willing to take her harmless flirtations in good part. How one man was cured of this jealous propensity and decided in the end that he had "some bride" is shown in a series of scintillating incidents which will please and amuse you. Advising you not to miss this clever play.

HEAVY MOVEMENT OF TROOPS DURING JUNE AND JULY WILL CROWD THE RAILROAD TRAINS

Several hundred thousand American soldiers now in Atlantic coast states will be moved to their homes during the latter part of this month and during July, according to word received by local railroad officials. The following information regarding the crowded condition of the trains next month will be placed on posters for the information of the traveling public:

"During the months of June and July the return movement of our soldiers from overseas will be at its height. In the last week of June and the first week of July passenger equipment must be provided at the Atlantic ports for the transportation of several hundred thousand soldiers. It is the paramount duty of the railroad administration to provide adequate facilities for the safe, prompt and comfortable return of the men to their homes. Every effort will be made to perform this duty with the minimum of inconvenience to those who travel for business or pleasure, but, until the troops have been moved, coaches and sleeping cars will be crowded and temporary discomfort will result. The railroad administration confidently relies upon your co-operation in carrying out this necessary program. (Signed) "WALKER D. HINES, Director General of Railroads."

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Arrangements were made today for members of the Utah committee which is here working for the passage of the Mondell soldier settlement bill to appear before the house public lands committee tomorrow or Thursday to speak in support of the measure. The Utah committee has been making a study of the arguments in opposition to the bill that have been presented and will answer them. The Utah delegation, composed of former Governor William Spry, William L. Hansen and J. Leo Meehan, spent the entire afternoon today with William E. Smythe and Harry T. Cory of the interior department, who are in charge of soldier settlement plans under Secretary Lane. They presented Utah's plans and proposed projects and were assured that they would receive favorable consideration if the Mondell bill was passed by congress.
