A BLACK CAT PARTY

By ELEANOR GLOVER.

Here is an idea with a genuine touch of novelty to it. The hostess sent out her invitations on cards in the shape of a black cat, the writing was done with red ink and she invited her guests to "come and find something to mew over." The date was Oct. 31, but nothing was said about Halloween.

The first scary episode was a huge black cat (made of black flannel and stuffed), standing on a white draped pedestal in the middle of the front walk, a huge jack-o'-lantern swung from a post beside it with placard in large letters: "The Black cat says: It's a sure sign of a quarrel if two persons pass on opposite sides of an object without saying 'Dread and butter.'" So take warning.

A ladder was raised over the front porch so the guests would have to pass under it and perched on the top round there was another black cat with a lantern close by and this warning: "Very bad luck to pass under the ladder without first stepping to whistle. Prepare to pucker or take the consequences."

In the dressing room a black cat on the mirror bore a reminder like this: "Two people looking in the same mirror must smile at each other to avoid bad luck. Smile, smile, smile."

There was a "Cat" contest given below and a Cheshire cat smiling contest, a prize being awarded to the one whose smile measured the largest. There was an official measurer with his assistant who took down the figures.

Just before refreshments they played "Fussy Wants a Corner." The table centerpiece was a witches' cauldron with wee black cats around it (from the favor counter). Sandwiches cut "cat-a-corner" were served with "redhairs" from a chafing dish. A black cat and a chocolate mouse were at each cover and the tall yellow candles had black cats on the shades.

HELPS TO BEAUTY

Heat and perspiration tend to relax the tissues of the face, and when there is a little sagging you will look older. You need an astringent. Ice water will help to set the muscles back and it will make the skin firm, but nothing is better than a good quality witch hazel. You can get it now, pleasantly perfumed. Use it after you have rubbed in plenty of cold cream, which, of course, you have allowed to remain awhile. After you have wiped this off, use the witch hazel.

Buttermilk is an old-fashioned bleach, so is lemon juice, which you must dilute. Use it twice a day and let stay on the face awhile before washing it off with cold water.

A simple way to dispose of a superfluous hair is to cover it with paraffin and the hair will come with it, though here again it is well to let the oil remain till the skin is softened.

Your hair is discouraging after the summer when dust and the sun have made it dry and lifeless. Perhaps something different has happened and perspiration and heat have overstimulated the oil glands. In one case you will need a rich, fat, oily tonic, in the other a light, stimulating, cleansing tonic. You can help the thin, dry hair back into beauty if you brush it a good deal.

A beauty expert says that once in three weeks is often enough for a thorough shampoo, and that between times you may use a dry shampoo, for which she recommends a coarse cornmeal, which will carry off dust and oil.

WITH OURSELVES

The visit of the prince of Wales to this country brings to mind the motto, "I Serve." Centuries ago a very wise man said this: "If any man would be great among you, let him be your servant."

How very different our attitude has grown with the passing of the years. We seem to be afraid that we shall lose our dignity, that vague thing, our standing, if we allow others to call on us for little services. We in-trench ourselves in a cool reserve to repel any attempt on the part of our associates. Sometimes we even cunningly plan to evade doing for others.

We pride ourselves on our ability to steer away from obligations of that variety, never thinking that by so doing we plainly indicate our own selfishness. Why act as if personal ease was the greatest attainment in the whole world?

We women have been erecting false standards in the last generation; we are reaping the harvest now; we have failed to teach our children the joy of service. We have depreciated some varieties of honest labor that we cannot get others to serve us in our homes. It is not as great to be ministered unto as it is to minister to others.

Nothing can demean service, but its unfaithful performance. Our gibes, our lack of consideration and understanding, have led to a forgetting of this truth. The evil has spread all over our country, to every branch of labor. When we can once more realize the true greatness of the motto, "I serve," then shall we be at least exerting our own influence to make this world safe for democracy and for each other.

DANCING ADDS GRACE

LONDON, England.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—London girls are graceful and generally walk better than their brothers, because they are fond of dancing, according to the medical officer of the London county council.

"Teaching of dancing in the public schools has no doubt greatly helped, if it has not saved the situation in regard to the physical development of London girls," said the medical officer. "Particularly noticeable is the much better arched instep of the girls in comparison with their own brothers and with country children generally."

"The relative absence of flat foot thus brought about is the foundation of that grace of carriage which the typical London girl of the elementary schools exhibits. In the country schools no dancing is taught, nor do the children there enjoy those outside stimuli to an interest in dancing which are characteristic of London life."

VALUE OF CEREALS

Cereals and their products are in general the cheapest sources of energy in food, although they differ greatly in cost among themselves, says a bulletin from the state college of agriculture.

There is little difference in fuel value between whole cereal products and refined products, but the whole cereal is superior as a source of several important food substances.

Cereals, however, are not as good a source of protein as their composition would indicate. For this reason cereals should be supplemented in the diet by the more available proteins furnished by such foods as milk, eggs and meat.

When it comes to sources of ash, containing lime, phosphorus and iron, the whole cereals are probably twice as valuable as the refined cereals. As a source of iron, rolled oats compares favorably with the whole wheat products.

The whole grains and their products are important sources of roughage and of one of the important growth inducing substances.

BODY OF DEAD BALLOONIST IS FOUND IN LAKE

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 16.—A telegram received here today by Major A. B. Lambert, from Cape Hurd, in Lake Huron, states that the body of a man found floating in the lake near there, has been identified as that of Lieutenant Edward J. Verheyden of this city aide to Captain Carl W. Dammann, who piloted the ill-fated balloon Wichita, which was found wrecked in the lake last week.

The identification of Verheyden's body proves conclusively, in the view-point of Major Lambert, that the two aeronauts dropped into Lake Huron with their bag, which was an entry in the national balloon race.

URUGUAYAN LABOR FEDERATION. MONTEVIDEAU, Uruguay, Wednesday, Oct. 15.—The Uruguayan Labor Federation has refused the invitation from the government labor bureau to designate a labor delegate as a member of the Uruguayan delegation to the international labor conference at Washington this month. This action was taken on the ground of resentment against the attitude of the authorities during the recent labor troubles. The Maritime Workers' Federation similarly refused an invitation to be represented on the delegation.

For more than forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been overcoming these ailments until it is now recognized everywhere as the standard remedy for woman's ills.
