LOVE and MARRIED LIFE

by the noted author
Idah McGlone Gibson

WHEN A HUSBAND NEEDS A WIFE.

"Marriage, sister, like everything else in life," Alice continued, "is merely a series of compromises and compensations."

"Well, I'll compromise with you this far. I'll wire John this morning that it is impossible for me to return with you at this time."

"All right, have your own way, and whatever you do, I'll stand by you, cause I admire your pluck. But oh, my dear, I think you're very foolish."

"I'm sorry I can't see just why I should take a ride of twelve hours in a motor with a woman who will, as you say, be jabbing me with pinpricks all the way; then stay perhaps twelve hours with John and make a night journey on the train back to mother, just for the sake of allowing John to think that he is having his own way?"

"And by the way, Alice, because John expected me to go home with you, I think it is the reason he did not send me any money. I shall also wire him to send me some."

"Don't do that, Kate, I've got plenty. How much do you want?"

"About two hundred dollars."

"Without a word Alice took out her pocketbook and handed me all the money she had except twenty dollars. 'Are you sure I am not taking too much?' I asked.

"Oh, if I need any more, I'll borrow it of Bess," she answered.

I smiled inwardly, as I thought with what joy Elizabeth Moreland would probably tell her husband that she had given his sister some money because her sister had loaned his wife all she had. I hoped she would.

"Don't you think that you could manage to return with us," asked Alice, "if we stayed two or three days?"

"Do you think that Miss Moreland would be satisfied to do that?" I asked.

"She will be perfectly content as long as Mr. Goodwin dances attendance upon her," laughed Alice.

"Charles won't have much time to dance attendance upon her, as he will be busy arranging things for mother."

"And Alice, I am quite sure you will find me if I say that both you and Bess Moreland would be more of a hindrance than a help to me now."

Alice followed me reluctantly to the library where I wrote out my telegram. "Impossible to return with you," Alice. Do not know how long mother's affairs will keep me here. Will write."

Alice read the copy without any comment and said: "I think Bess and I will start home directly after luncheon. It is moonlight and we will arrive about midnight anyway. Better change your mind and come along," and she slipped her arm about my waist.

Her reiteration of the invitation made me feel that she was sure John would be very angry, and this was confirmed by an answer to the telegram which I received in the afternoon after they had gone.

"Can't understand what important affairs can keep you with your mother. Bring her with you and I'll settle them here. A motor ride will do her good. John."

This was the first telegram I had received from my husband that he had not signed: "With love."

I didn't waste a thought on what John would say when his sister and Elizabeth arrived home, for there was one thing I had determined to do during the remainder of my married life—I should not cross a bridge until I came to it.

I knew from the way that Charles kept silent about the visit that he had some very distinct ideas on the subject, especially as he said:

"I am glad, Kate, you have decided to stay with your mother for a while."

We worked that afternoon and all the next day packing the things that were to be sent to my house and I was so very tired the second night that I slept soundly until about 9 in the morning, when I was awakened by the arrival of another telegram which read: "I wake up this morning to find myself involved in disagreeable scandal which will inevitably result in a certain amount of publicity. Although I was not myself last night I cannot think the affair is as serious as it seems. I think it is an attempt to get money from me. My chief regret is the grief and just anger that you will feel over my foolishness. But you must understand that when I am myself I love you and you only. Can you not return to me immediately? I need you more than any one else in the world. Loving only you and always, John."

Another slip of paper fell from the envelope that if I would call at the office I should find a remittance of five hundred dollars.

I dressed hastily and went down to breakfast, where I found Charles who looked very anxious as he thrust a telegram addressed to him into my hand.

Don't Spoil a Good Meal With a Bad Stomach

If a physician, a specialist in stomach disease, came to you and said: "I will fix up that miserable, worn out stomach for you or money back."

"I will make it as good as new so you will not suffer from any distress and can eat what you want without fear of suffering, or money back would you turn down his offer?"

And when you are offered Mi-na stomach tablets, made from a prescription better than any of the stomach specialists know how to give, are you going to be narrow minded and continue to suffer from indigestion, or are you going to be fair to yourself and try Mi-na on the money back agreement.

Mi-na stomach tablets are offered to you on this basis, that if they do not put your stomach into such good shape that there is no dizziness, sour stomach, biliousness, sick headache, and stomach distress, your money will be returned. ### MINE OPERATORS MEET.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Mine operators from all parts of the country gathered here today to work out details of the 14 per cent wage increase suggested by the government for bituminous coal miners.

It was said that the findings of the central field committee probably would be submitted to Fuel Administrator Garfield for ratification, but that several days would be needed to work out problems presented.

Continued optimism in official circles was marked, although production figures available showed no increase in daily tonnage. This is now estimated semi-officially at better than 40 per cent of normal.

In the central district, however, hardly a pound of coal is being produced, except by wagon mines and a strip pit or two, operators said.

Albert Jensen is reported to be an adopted son of the man whose home he is said to have robbed. Some months ago he and the Piper boy were released from the reform school. Since the boys returned to Salt Lake, the juvenile authorities have been suspicious of their actions, but had no direct evidence against them, say the police.

About a week ago nearly $100 in money and a watch belonging to Mr. Jensen were taken from the Jensen residence. After the arrest of the two boys yesterday the watch and a considerable part of the money were recovered, say the authorities.
