

FINAL CHAPTER IN SOCIALISM DISPUTE

ALBANY, N. Y., March 31.—The writing of the final chapter in the case of the five Socialist members of the assembly, suspended on the first day of the 1920 session of the legislature, was begun this afternoon when the clerk of the lower house read the majority report of the assembly judiciary committee which recommends the unseating of all five Socialist assemblymen.

Proceedings were delayed by a debate on a motion by Assemblyman Peter A. Hamill, Democrat, of New York, that consideration of the Socialist matter be postponed until tomorrow.

The motion was defeated by a vote of 99 to 41.

The attempt of the Democrats to postpone action until tomorrow was based, it was said, in the coat rooms, on a desire to spare Governor Smith the embarrassment of either calling or refusing to call special elections in the five districts from which the Socialist members come. If the suspended members should be unseated today the governor could, under the law, call special elections, but vacancies occurring after the last day in March cannot be filled by special elections unless there is an extraordinary session of the legislature.

Serious Charges Against Kidnapers in Arizona

TOMBSTONE, Ariz., March 31.—Information that the state will try to prove that sick men were dragged from their beds and babies struck with bullets during the Bisbee deportation of July 12, 1917, was given today by County Attorney Robert N. French during cross-examination of Harry C. Wheeler, former sheriff of Cochise county, at the trial of Harry E. Woodruff, charged with kidnaping in connection with the deportations.

Soviet Government Files Libel Suit Against U. S.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 31.—The soviet government of Russia, through San Francisco authorities, filed a libel action in the United States district court today for the return of the Russian steamer Rogdal, now in San Francisco harbor, to Bolshevik control and the payment of $50,000 damages for the libeling of the vessel by other parties.

The suit was filed in the name of the "Russian Socialist federal soviet republic" and Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, its representative or agent.

The steamer belonged originally to the Russian volunteer fleet. It now is held "by parties unknown," according to the complaint, following efforts made by some of its seamen to collect back wages here. The complaint held that the vessel is a warcraft not subject to civil law.

The complaint demands the reason for the original seizure of the vessel's name and other supposed attempts to rid her of Russian identity.

Mississippi Fails to Ratify Woman Vote

JACKSON, Miss., March 31.—The Mississippi legislature late today finally refused to ratify the federal woman suffrage amendment. The action came in the form of a motion to disagree with the senate resolution of yesterday which favored ratification. The motion to disagree was carried 54 to 23.

The house was avowedly hostile to ratification. An uproar of nays followed a demand that the clerk be permitted to read telegrams from Democratic leaders and others from all parts of the country urging ratification.

Governor Russell, although momentarily expected to make his "little talk" in favor of ratification, did not appear.

Speakers who endeavored to address the body in support of the measure were hooted and jeered.

DOVER, Del., March 31.—The vote in the house on ratification of the suffrage amendment, which was expected this afternoon failed to materialize when Representative Hart who had promised to bring the measure up for final passage refused to do so, saying certain things had happened which would make rejection necessary.

HAMBURG BECOMES GRAVEYARD PORT

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Hamburg today may be described as an imposing monument to the dead glories of the German merchant marine, according to Consul Francis R. Stewart, who was detailed by the American commission in Berlin to investigate conditions at the former premier's German port for that body. A report from Mr. Stewart detailing the results of his inquiry has just reached the department of commerce.

A short trip through the harbor quickly discloses what a graveyard the port has become. The consul reported: "Trees and lighters are tied up here and there, apparently forgotten. One small cruiser rests, deserted alongside a pier; electric cranes are motionless on unused docks; floating elevators and docks are moored in rows, probably in readiness for delivery to the allies.

"The great Bismarck (55,000 ton Hamburg-American liner) floats at a fitting-out pier without a sign of life on board and from a launch no new work could be seen in any of the big shipyards. Tied up to another pier in the outer harbor is the former Atlantic record-holder, the steamship Deutschland, relic of the war, painted a deep black overall, with spots of white showing here and there where passing craft have scraped her sides, a grim reminder of the glories once held by the German merchant fleets."

LOYD GEORGE TALKS ON IRISH HOME RULE

RAMONA E. LEFEVRE

LONDON, March 31.—Answering arguments in the house of commons today against the Irish home rule bill, Premier Lloyd George declared the government had every reason to be satisfied with the course of the debate as it demonstrated that the government's plan was the only one that held the field.

The difficulty of the problem, the premier said, is that no proposals which would be acceptable to any party in this country would be accepted by any party in Ireland. If the people of Ireland were asked what plan they would accept, declared Mr. Lloyd George, they would say by an emphatic majority: "We want independence and an Irish republic."

The premier insisted there was no use of talking about self-determination since those who supported it must go to the full length of granting an Irish republic.

"Self-determination," continued the premier, "does not mean that every part of the country, which has been acting together for a hundred years, should have the right to say: 'We mean to set up a separate republic.' There must be a limit to the application of any principle; otherwise it might be carried to every locality in every country throughout the world."

Mr. Lloyd George asserted that no one had accepted the plan of former Premier Asquith. Dealing with the suggestion of John R. Clynes, Labor, for a constituent assembly, the premier emphasized that the previous Irish convention had failed and asked if it were likely that the assembly proposed by Mr. Clynes would be any more successful. Since any proposal which Irish opinion would by a large majority accept would not be accepted by any party in Great Britain, Mr. Lloyd George declared, therefore the government must exercise its judgment for the United Kingdom and the whole empire in order to come to the wisest conclusion possible.

The premier reiterated his declaration that the government plan held the field because it recognized the fact that the house would not satisfy Irish opinion in its present state without destroying the essential unity of the kingdom. The demand in Ireland for the moment was for independence and secession not self-government. Mr. Lloyd George said he wanted to say nothing more than the United States

"our American friends" that Eamonn de Valera was putting forward the same language as Jefferson Davis and that some of the men who voted for the Irish self-determination motion in the senate the other day had acceded to the southern states of America the very demand they are now supporting for Ireland.

The acceptance of that demand, declared the premier, would never come. It was a demand which, if persisted in, he said, would lead to exactly the same measures of repression as in the case of the southern states of America.

Great Britain, he declared, claimed had claimed for themselves. Great Britain, he added, would stand on its own legs.

There were certain powers which might be conferred upon Ireland when she settled down to an established union and accepted partnership with the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the union and of herself. It would be placing dangerous weapons in the hands of an infuriated people, he declared. The premier concluded by saying he believed the bill would result in bringing about the union of the north and the south, union with Protestants and Catholics, union with Great Britain and Ireland.

REMNANTS! THAT'S THE GERMAN NAVY TODAY

The port of Kiel, Germany, is harboring what's left of the former strong Germany navy. The few old battleships that the Allies didn't take have been assembled to be overhauled and made seaworthy. It's not much of an "assemblage."
