oared event for the Thames challenge cup. It is doubtful whether finer or pluckier contests than those today ever were witnessed on this historic course.

He signed to fight Bob Martin in a ten-round boxing bout, and he was still a-sleeping when the seconds lugged him out.

Hod Eller walked back to the bench filled with remorse and gloom. With freak stuff taken from his arm, he said: "I see my doom."

Without a shine ball I'm no use to Moran and his team. I can't get by with other curves. They don't have any steam.

The rules have knocked me for a goal. I can't show my best skill. Unless I get my shine back I'll go to court, I will.

Now, Slim Sallee is just like Hod. He throws the regular ball. Sal's backing Hod to go to court. And make the powers fall.

The ban on freak pitching is hitting some of the boys harder than they expected—and so are some of the 1919 sluggers.

Eller says that he is no use to the Reds unless he uses his "shiner," and that the next time he is called on to pitch he is going to use it—and appeal the case to the courts when the law of the umpire calls him.

Sallee is a "reelin' ball thrower. He's having the same kind of trouble that Eller is experiencing in trying to get by without it.
