MAIL PLANE IS SEEN OVER CITY

Air Machine Bound for Salt Lake Loses Bearings Coming Over Wasatch

Ogden was given a glimpse of the first regularly assigned transcontinental airplane carrying mail yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, when Lieutenant Buck Hebron, flying DeHavilland plane No. 102, lost his bearings after passing over the Wasatch range and circled about the city in an endeavor to regain his direction. He zigzagged about in various directions until at last he found his course and sped to the south.

COMES FROM CHEYENNE

The pilot came from Cheyenne yesterday, carrying 400 pounds of mail, and despite numerous difficulties landed safely at Salt Lake at 5:03 o'clock. The fact that several pilots have selected the lowest route through the high Wasatch range and consequently have flown off the assigned course and come over Ogden after following the natural course rather than that mapped, has led Ogden officials to believe more strongly that Ogden should have been the city selected in Utah as a landing site. If pilots in the future follow the natural terrain they will come to Ogden first and fly out of their regularly assigned course and thereby lose time.

CAUSES DELAY. A broken gasoline tank and other motor trouble caused delay in leaving Rock Springs. Lieutenant Hebron arrived here at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. Three mechanics worked on the machine until 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon when the start was made for Salt Lake. The distance was covered from Rock Springs in two hours and eighteen minutes. This was considered good time in view of the fact that most of the distance was made partly through rain and partly in a misty sky.
