WAR WITH JAPAN.

With one of our great national parties openly declaring there is an Asiatic peril and a number of speakers advocating that we prepare to meet the issue by the force of arms, how is this country to keep out of another war?

The following is a quotation from an article telling of the meeting in Salt Lake City on Monday, at which Lieut. Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and Raymond Robins spoke:

Raymond Robins, with dramatic tenacity such as is seldom witnessed in this city, was the second speaker of the evening. He told of his early life and experiences, declaring that he was one of the men of the last frontier.

Mr. Robins declared that the next turn to arms would be to fight the Orient, and he pictured Japan as the leader there, arrogant and deceitful, and said that should this country enter the league of nations the United States would be on the side of Japan in the Orient and forced to aid her.

This is serious talk and must find an echo among the hot-heads of Japan. There is a military spirit in Japan which only needs the impulse of a direct challenge to be inflamed.

There must be much information on this subject which has not been disclosed to the public.

AIR MAIL PLANE BURNS

Our postoffice department does not seem to be deterred by the numerous accidents which have attended the operation of the air mail plane service from coast to coast.

Not less than five aviators have lost their lives and a dozen planes have been destroyed. But the officials go on, expressing faith by persisting in their efforts.

On Tuesday, a pilot and mechanic, operating a plane carrying mail near Cleveland, Ohio, were burned to death when their machine, at an altitude of 500 feet, caught fire.

While this disaster was being reported, the department was letting contracts for three new air mail routes between Pittsburg and St. Louis, between New York and Chicago, and between New York and Atlanta, Ga.

It is yet to be fully demonstrated whether the airplane is sufficiently safeguarded against accident to be permanently employed in carrying mail.

An innovation, which promises to do much to avoid accidents to belated planes at night, has been announced by Colonel John A. Jordan, superintendent of the western division of the air service. Electric lights, operated by wireless, will be placed on the front of the machines. They will be tuned to the wireless instruments of the terminal points and will shine only when the planes are within a radio path 200 feet wide.

With more improvements of this kind, the airplane eventually may be made comparatively safe.

AT THE BULL FIGHT.

A Spanish crowd at a bull fight demands action. A dispatch from Madrid says:

Bull fight "fans" at Haro, province of Logrono, displeased at the work of Rafael Gomez, a torreador known as "Gallo," forced him to take flight in an automobile after the conclusion of Sunday's festival.

At Tetuan, Morocco, Blanquito was forced to kill five bulls after his companions, Chull and Carrion, were tossed and injured rather seriously. Blanquito's work was acceptable to the crowd.

Our students of human nature should be able to draw a lesson from this exhibition of brutality. Being accustomed to seeing bulls tortured and then dispatched, the crowds at the arena amusements are displeased whenever the brutality and flow of blood do not produce the required amount of thrill and excitement.

The American prize fight is a tame affair, when compared with a bull fight.

CONQUERING WITH TRADE.

America's enlarging foreign trade is worrying the countries with which competition is intense. During the month of July the United States shipped abroad $343,000,000 of manufactured goods, or an increase of more than $109,000,000 over July, 1919.

In years gone by, American manufactured goods did not gain favor in other countries as rapidly as their merits warranted, owing principally to the fact that American business methods are so radically different from foreign customs as to be an almost complete block to trade.

Billions of dollars of our fabricated goods are advertising the resources and genius of the American skilled worker and the power of the factories of this country to make America respected in all parts of the world.

The individual is the result of his processes. He cannot get away from his deeds, for they issue in himself. This is true in the physical part of our being. One's vocation reacts on his physique. It registers in bone and muscle, in blood and nerve cells. His daily work leaves its mark on his body.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

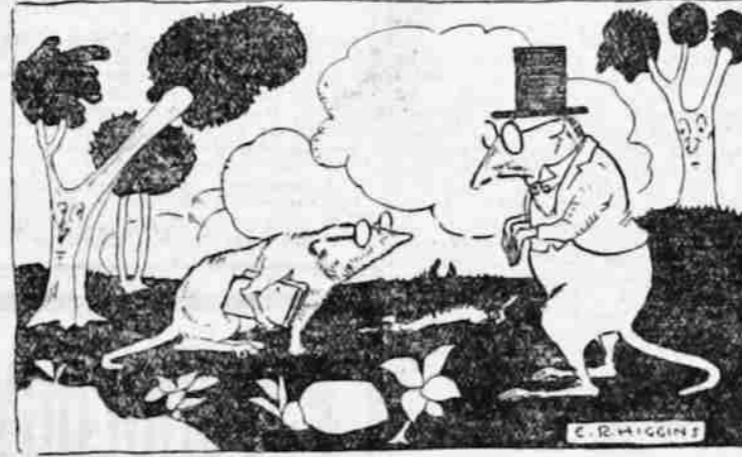

MUFF MOLE MEETS FLOPPY MOUSE.

"Daddy," cried Muff Mole one morning as he was starting off to the Meadow Grove School, "please let me stay home today, won't you? After the storm yesterday it's fine worm-hunting, and besides I'm sick of lessons!"

Mike Mole shook his head sternly. "No, of course you can't stay at home. What would Mr. Scribble Scratch think? Besides he'd be suspecting you."

The North Star and left him alone. He was swinging his books by their straps as though he'd like to give them one extra hard swing and land them in a tree-top where he'd never see them again. Why? He'd just heard that the corn over at Smith's was getting ripe and as sweet as the inside of your sugar-bowl.

He, too, had coaxed and coaxed to stay home that day, but Munchie Mouse, his father, had stopped emp-

Mike Mole shook his head. "No, of course you can't stay at home."

They were playing truant and he sending that attendance-officer Nick here after you. I won't have him poking around here spoiling my house, so you run along and get your lessons and be sure you make a hundred today in spelling."

Muff didn't say anything more for he knew it was of no use, and trotted off to school as though the matter were ended. But his brain was busy for all that.

On the way he met Floppy Field Mouse, and Floppy was looking as though all his friends had moved to living the garbage-cans in Maple-Tree Flats long enough to give him a lecture on steadiness and things like that which is most unsatisfying when the corn's ripe and your back teeth are fairly watering for it.

"The Mole boy humped right into the Mouse boy, both looking as grim as blue Monday."

"Lo," said Muff. "Lo," answered Flop. And they trudged glumly on together.

Olive Thomas in One of Last Pictures Comes to Ogden Theatre Today

What promises to be a photoplay of rare quality is "The Flapper," a Sally Nick picture starring Olive Thomas, which will be shown at the Ogden theatre for four days beginning today.

Miss Thomas, known in private life as Mrs. Jack Pickford, died in Paris, on Sept. 10. "The Flapper" is next to the last picture she appeared in.

This photoplay, written by Frances Marion, has a delicious romantic and amusing plot, depicting the adventures of a boarding school girl who seeks excitement and "experience." Her pose of sophistication and "wickedness" involves her in many odd scrapes. She is accused of being the accomplice of burglars in several "hauls." Besides, there are a number of other annoying complications which add zest to the performance and bring joy to the audience.

fit of a heart-breaking, home-wrecking adventure. There are a number of colorful and picturesque settings, including a snow-skiing scene, beautiful spots in sunny Florida, and an animated scene in the beautiful ballroom and dining room of the new Hotel Pennsylvania, in New York.

FASHIONS OWN COFFIN ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 11.—Jose Ruiz was buried here recently in a coffin which he had built himself in 1918 in anticipation of his death. He was not skilled as a carpenter, but when he felt that the end was drawing near, he ordered the necessary materials and set to work to build the coffin. Although he was only five feet seven inches tall, he made the coffin. Although he was only five feet two inches wide, it was so large that it could hardly be put in the hearse.

Rippling Rhymes

FEET OF CLAY.

At times some saffron writer has made a hit with me, some sane and forceful fighter against iniquity. Without too much of preaching, great truth his books expound, the truths that should be reaching this weary world around. And every time I read him, I think, "His life's a poem. The soul sick people need him, to bring their sunshine home!"

HANDED OVER (By International News Service) CHICAGO—A heartbreaking struggle to obtain money for her baby's ransom—the desperate expedient of forged checks—then arrest and jail. Those are the principal features in the case of Mrs. Clara Walters, pretty scenographer under arrest here, and therefrom developed an amazing story of mother love.

Mrs. Walters was staying at the apartment of Mrs. Maude Goodhue when she was accused of stealing a diamond ring. She admitted the theft but between tears averred that she had stolen the jewel to buy clothes for her baby.
