TOMATO OUTPUT BELOW NORMAL

Ogden Canner Says Several Plants Not Contributing Usual Quota

That the tomato crop from a canning standpoint will fall below normal during the present season is the opinion expressed by H. L. Herrington, vice president of the Utah Canners' association. Some of the plants of the state will produce normal crops, Mr. Herrington states, but the majority will be far under the output of 1919.

Several of the factories are not in operation, thus contributing to the reduction in the output. At the Utah Canning company the output, however, will be normal, with an output of 100,000 cases. The tomato season should end about October 12, providing frost fails to set in, he said.

EIGHT MILLION FOR BEET MEN

Enormous Sum to Be Paid to Farmers of Utah and Idaho

More than $3,000,000 will be paid farmers of Utah and Idaho for sugar beets during the coming season, according to Vice President S. M. Edgell of the Amalgamated Sugar company. Of this amount more than $6,000,000 will be paid for beets alone while the remaining $2,000,000 goes as bonuses to the farmers during the months of January and February.

Sugar plants of the Amalgamated companies in northern Utah and in Idaho are now operating and from all indications the crops of 1919 will be shattered. The Ogden plant will not resume operation until the latter part of October due to the fact that the plant is undergoing numerous repairs. The beets from this district are being shipped to Logan and Smithfield plants until the repairs here are completed.

Rumors in Ogden yesterday to the effect that a second drop in sugar would be made during the coming week caused considerable interest. This statement, however, could not be verified by local officials. Officials of the Amalgamated Sugar company, however, stated that this information must first be received from the San Francisco headquarters before cuts in the present prices could be made. They intimated, however, that cuts in the prices were expected daily, stating that sugar in the east is now selling at $13.50 a bag.

Weber's New Shop Nears Completion

The new manual training shop at the Weber Normal college which has been constructed for the use of students enrolled in that course, will be ready for use during the early part of the present week, according to Malcolm Watson, in charge of the shop. New lathes, saws and other equipment have been installed at the school at a cost of more than $2000 which makes the department equal to any in the state.

CONTRACTORS RETURN EAST

Men Who Will Supervise the Building of Arsenal Leave For Equipment

Materials for the construction work on the Ogden Arsenal are being rushed to Ogden from points in the east, according to Major Ora Bundy, and Captain W. P. Katz, officers in charge. The materials are arriving daily and are being transferred to the site where they will be used in the construction of the buildings by the W. M. Sutherland Building and Construction company.

Two officials of the company, W. M. Sutherland and E. F. Hume departed last week for St. Louis, where they will push equipment to be used in the construction work, including steam shovels, concrete mixers.

In the absence of Mr. Sutherland and Mr. Hume, the work now being accomplished at the arsenal is being done under the direction of J. H. Wald, who is associated with the firm. One hundred and fifty men are now on the job and this number will be increased to more than 300 before the winter sets in, it is said. Next spring a force of 1500 will be employed to push the buildings to completion. The administration building, which is the largest building to be constructed, will be the last building to be completed. Work on this building has already been started.

BACK-YARD DAIRY MUST GO; BARN NOW HOME FOR FLIVVER

By FLOYD TIMMERMAN. The back-yard private dairy must go.

This is the edict of the city board of health which, under the law, must see that the pet cow in the back yard, where she might not horn in on a neighbor's business and muss up the landscape in the rear of the home. No more can the city dwellers rush to his back-yard in the early morning and stroke bossy into furnishing him with fresh, rich cream for his coffee. The law says that bossy must have more elbow room and cannot be properly maintained in a two-by-four back-yard and get by the sharp eyes of the city sanitary inspectors.

MUST STAY PUT. There are provisions, however, which may allow certain fortunate persons to still keep the pet bovine within hailing distance, but these exceptions are few. In the first place, the law sets forth that if a cow is kept in the back-yard it must not be a member of the family, must remember that it is a cow and not a human and must not approach the house at a closer distance than fifty feet.

There are other conditions under the law, which might allow a good citizen to keep his private dairy close by, but they all have their drawbacks, to wit:

Sanitary inspectors are inclined to pass up an opportunity of offering property to a man keeps a cow in his yard where there is plenty of open space. That is, if the bovine is properly chaperoned by the owner and kept from becoming a nuisance to neighbors. If, however, the pet frequently wanders over fences and chews up the neighbor's clothes on the line, that neighbor may, if he chooses to be so harsh, insist that the pet be sent to the open country on an extended vacation.

Wyo. County Explains Loss in Population

Hastening to point out that on injustice had been done to Uinta county, Wyo., by the census returns in which the population for 1920 is given as 6,611, compared to 16,982 in 1910, a loss of 41.1 per cent, The Standard-Examiner is informed by several subscribers in that section and in Ogden that Uinta county was split up to form Lincoln county since the last census was taken, thus accounting for the apparent loss.

DEMANDS PROOF OF COMMON-LAW KNOT. AKRON—He'll have to prove he's married before he can get a divorce! Walter C. Payne told Presiding Judge Spleer that "some time in September, 1912, in St. Louis, the parties named in the suit agreed between themselves to live together as man and wife." Now they want to end the agreement. "You'll have to prove a common-law marriage existed before I can grant a divorce," the judge ruled.

Abandon Cafeteria For Weber Normal

On account of the crowded conditions at Weber Normal college the cafeteria planned last summer for the school to be used during the coming fall and winter terms, will not be placed at the disposal of students until the fall of 1921, according to officials of the school.

The enrollment at the school at this time is more than 750 which is a new record for the school at the end of the first week's registration. It is expected, however, that at least 850 students will be enrolled at the school. The rooms formerly occupied by the manual training students in the basement and which were to be used for the cafeteria have been turned into classrooms. While the registration at the school is heavier than in any past years, President Joel Ricks states that the school is prepared to handle additional students.
