Her Son Freed From Prison, Mrs. Pender Returns To Ogden

John Arthur Pender, former Ogden man, who was convicted in Oregon of the murder of a woman and child at Scappoose, Ore., in September, 1911, sentenced to be hanged and later had his sentence commuted to life imprisonment, has been the subject of numerous articles in Oregon newspapers, following his unconditional pardoning by Governor Olcott.

His mother, Mrs. S. C. Pender of Ogden, who has devoted the past nine years to a fight for her son's release, has returned to Ogden. Pender's father was former captain of detectives of the Ogden police force.

Concerning Pender's release, a Portland paper says: "Pender at one time was sentenced to be executed, but his punishment later was commuted to life imprisonment by Governor West. Pender has been a trusty steadily ever since he was received at the penitentiary and has been a model prisoner. Brandon's prison record compares favorably with that of Pender."

PRISON SEEMS AFFECTING. Immediately upon signing the pardon Governor Olcott and Don E. Upjohn, private secretary of the executive, went to the penitentiary. There they were joined by Louis Goss, warden of the prison; Percy Varney, parole officer; James Lewis, deputy warden; J. O. Murray, bookkeeper, and E. C. Hawley, principal keeper. Pender was called into the office of the prison.

"I want to discuss some circumstances of your case," said Governor Olcott as Pender entered the room and occupied a chair. Then, taking an envelope from his pocket, the governor handed it to Pender and asked that he read it. Pender read the words "Unconditional Pardon" his voice choked and his eyes filled with tears.

"I appreciate your kindness," said Pender to Governor Olcott, "and want to say that you never will regret your action."

Time and again during the conversation that followed Pender mentioned his mother, whom he said he would strive to repay for her many years of mental suffering.

MEETS HIS MOTHER. The Portland Sunday Oregonian, under date of September 12, says: "A heart filled with mother love choked last night when Mrs. S. C. Pender, 78-year-old mother of John Arthur Pender, collapsed in the arms of her son aboard an Oregon electric train. John Pender, freed from a life sentence for a murder of which he was convicted on circumstantial evidence, was hastening to the side of his mother when they met on the train as it arrived in Portland."

John Pender, over six feet tall, clasped his mother in his arms and for minutes in the doorway of the train neither could move nor utter a syllable. The conductor, who knew, just smiled and held back those who didn't understand.

"Nearly nine years behind the bars. What did it mean? Maybe I can answer that when I say someone offered me all the wealth in the world and all the power of all the nations, I wouldn't go through it again." That was the epitomized sentiment of Pender.

WIFE ABSENT AT STATION. "I bear no malice; I seek no revenge. I have my boy, and my heart is filled with the love of him. That is the message to the mother."

The welcome for Pender was marred just a little by the absence of his wife. She is a nurse, and having been assigned a case, could not leave her patient to welcome her husband.

Lying in a little brass bed in her room at 681 Hoyt street, Mrs. Pender, the mother, dropped her head before last, that "Arthur was free."

"He stood there in his prison clothes, and I said, 'How did you get here?' and he replied, 'My friends got me out.'"

And, continuing, as most mothers might do, but coming from dream-land to reality, she said she hurried to board the train on which her son was coming to Portland, she added:

"What with this rain and all, I wonder if he is dressed warmly?" "I have spent my all in trying to free John," she said. "I have lost the little home I had in Ogden because I couldn't pay the taxes. Now, when I am growing old and need the comfort of my boy's presence, I must go through the days realizing that Oregon has taken him from me for a crime which he did not commit. He is incapable of doing such a thing. Not only his mother says that, but all the men with whom he has associated have testified to his moral character."

individuals and officers of organizations who had been working in Pender's behalf for many months, in confidence of his innocence, uniting in expressing commination of the exercise of executive clemency.

"The pardoning of Pender by Governor Olcott was a most fitting act of justice," declared John P. Logan last night. Mr. Logan, who is a member of the state parole board, was Pender's attorney at the trial. The parole board recently recommended the parole of Pender, but in the action Mr. Logan was excused from participating because of his interest in the case.

"The unconditional pardon," continued Mr. Logan, "is complete vindication of Pender. Governor Withycombe felt that the guilt of the man was highly questionable, and Governor Olcott waited until he was satisfied before taking action. Pender was a victim of most unfortunate circumstances, and also was the victim of perjury on the part of some of the witnesses. He has been a model prisoner and Governor Olcott's action is a simple act of justice."

VETERANS FEEL ELATED. "That's fine," declared H. V. Reed, commander of Camp No. 2, United Spanish War Veterans, last night, when apprised of the news by The Oregonian. Pender was a member of the Spanish War Veterans, and the Portland organization has been one of the strongest forces fighting for his release. "I wish I could find words to commend The Oregonian for its strong support of the Spanish War Veterans and all lovers of justice will appreciate it."

"The governor is to be commended for his action," declared Harvey Wells, a past commander of the Scout Young camp and a member of the committee which has been working for the man's release. "We have felt confident of Pender's innocence, and his unconditional pardon comes as but simple justice to a man who has for several years been a victim of misfortune."

Action of the governor was heartily commended by W. D. Wheelwright, chairman of the child welfare commission and a member of the board of directors of the Oregon Prisoners Aid society. "The pardon comes as the result of the efforts which have been put forth by those who were convinced of Pender's innocence, and the voice of The Oregonian was a great factor in accomplishing the final result."

"The individuals and organizations that worked for the pardon of Pender have accomplished a great humanitarian work," declared Mrs. R. S. Bondurant, an officer of the Oregon Prisoners Aid society. "It made me very happy to receive the news last night and I sent a telegram to Governor Olcott on behalf of the society commending his action."

The Whelan murder was committed by a sadist. It was more a matter of the murderer hacking the head of the mother after killing her and the child with bullets. Pender, according to physicians, bears no marks of a sadist. Slirks, who confessed the crime and later repudiated his confession, is said by physicians to bear traces of that character.
