Confessed Blackmailer Returns to Prison After 15 Months of Liberty

SORRY HE VIOLATED STORRS' CONFIDENCE

Martin Saves $500 From Work as Carpenter for His Family

Joseph Henry Martin, Ogden confessed blackmailer and burglar, has returned to the Utah state penitentiary. After freedom for fifteen months, following his escape from the prison where he was serving a life term, Martin arrived in Ogden last Thursday night and yesterday telephoned from here to Warden George L. Storrs, that he was ready to give himself up.

Martin, according to his story, spent four days and nights in Ogden and went to his family, where a surprise reunion was held. He spent most of the time in the house and by appointment met Warden Storrs there last night and was returned to prison.

LEAVES PRISON

Martin, who was considered one of the most notorious and desperate criminals of the west, walked out of the gates of the prison at Ogden on July 8, 1919, and until September 20 the Utah authorities were without a clue as to his whereabouts. He wrote to Warden Storrs on that date expressing a desire to return to prison and make amends for his acts.

Last Thursday night he arrived in Ogden and yesterday telephoned Warden Storrs, making an appointment for yesterday, when he later surrendered himself. Martin met the warden here last yesterday and was taken back to the prison. He expressed a desire to expiate his past misdeeds for the sake of his family and his own conscience. The reasons Martin gave for giving himself up after having eluded capture for 15 months were:

HOW HE ESCAPED

According to his story, Martin made straight for Emigration canyon when he walked through the prison gate last July. In the canyon he made his way over the hills to Morgan and there caught a freight train into Ogden. That night he hid for an hour in the Ogden river, where he was detected by police throughout the country were being warned to look for him.

SAVES SOME COIN

Meanwhile, through a friend of his wife's he had sent her $50 for herself and the children. When he met the warden yesterday Martin had saved $50 with which to make life a bit more comfortable for his family, and he gave himself up to the warden without regret. Indeed, he seemed happy to relieve his mind of the ever-present fear of apprehension to find himself once more where his crimes had brought him.

WRITES LETTER TO WARDEN

Martin's decision to give himself up was announced to Warden Storrs in the following letter, written September 29: "You no doubt will be a little surprised to hear from me. I have been thinking of doing this for the past four months, but somehow or other I could not fully make up my mind just what was the best course for me to pursue. For the sake of my wife and children, I am going to return to your institution of my own free will in the hope that you will forgive me for my action of July last year ago. Many is the time I have regretted my acts of leaving you as I did. At the time I was under great mental stress, worried and disappointed at the conduct of others toward me the newspapers in particular.
