THE MASHER IN THE AUTOMOBILE.
 Calling on the mayor, a mother of two girls said:
 "Do you know the automobile masher has become a source of real concern to the mothers of this community who are endeavoring to give to their girls the protection to which they are entitled until they have reached the age of discretion?"
 Then the mother went on to relate a number of incidents.
 One evening, as her daughter, 17 years old, was proceeding home from the Carnegie library, an unknown man drove up to the curb, stepped out of an enclosed car and called:
 "Girls! Oh, girls!"
 Receiving no response, he commanded:
 "Come here, girls! I say, come here!"
 The young girl started on a run and entered a place of refuge half a block from the library, the automobile in pursuit along the street.
 Coming home from a moving picture show at 9 o'clock the mother herself was the object of attention. A man in a car followed a block and did not turn away until he discovered that the woman was elderly.
 This mother reports that her girls or neighboring girls have been invited to enter enclosed cars on at least half a dozen occasions.
 That there is reason for alarm over this stalking of girls, as the sport of low fellows, is proved by the following story of an actual occurrence in San Francisco only last week:
 Jessie Montgomery, 21, and Jean Stanley, 23, phone girls living with "Mother" Tyrell of the Salvation Army at 315 Fifth street, had been in San Francisco a month from Reno and Portland.
 They were tired of the relentless grind of their work. Last night they "stepped out."
 To the Winter Garden dance hall the young women went. There they danced until a late hour. Out on the street, waiting for a car, a man whom they recognized as one of their dancing partners drove up in an auto.
 He tipped his hat and said:
 "Hello girls. Hop in. I'll take you home."
 Miss Stanley and Miss Montgomery hesitated, then decided to accept the invitation.
 The big car whirled them away. It stopped in front of a pool hall. Another man got in. He was introduced as a friend of their escort.
 "Take us home," pleaded the girls. They were uneasy, but not afraid.
 The auto dashed away. It stopped again. This time six men got in, calling jovially to the man in the car.
 The girls were alarmed. They pleaded to be taken home.
 "It will do no harm to have some ice cream with us," said the driver.
 And so away the young women whirled with the men. The auto stopped at 1256 1/2 Howard street.
 Protesting every step of the way, almost tearful, the phone girls were led into the house. The door was closed behind them.
 One of the men thrust a glass of whisky into Miss Montgomery's hand. She refused to take a drink.
 "Drink that hooch, d— you, or I'll force it down your throat," said the man, the girl says.
 The girl struck at him. Two men seized her and pinioned her hands behind her back. Then slowly, brutally the man with the glass poured burning liquor down her throat.
 Miss Montgomery struck at the man. He hit back, a smashing blow to the jaw that sent her reeling across the floor and down into the corner in a dead faint.
 An hour later—maybe more—she came too. Her head ached. She felt cold. Her body was stripped of its clothing. Her dress, waist lay in shreds about the room. And she, naked, lay on a mat in the center of the floor.
 One of the men moved toward her and attempted an assault, the girl says. She fought him off. He drew a gun and thrust it in her face, she charges.
 "I'll poke your eyes out, you—," he is said to have told her.
 At that moment, she heard the scream of her friend, Miss Stanley, in an adjoining room.
 The men turned as one and rushed into the next room. Miss Montgomery looked around. She saw a window. The next minute plunged headlong through its glass.

 Down the street she ran until an apartment house loomed in sight. Here she stopped and telephoned to the police.
 In the house police found two men: "K. O." Krivosky, prize-fighter, and Allen McDonnell. Krivosky and McDonnell were placed under arrest. They told the police they had just entered the house.
 At the police station the sobbing, hysterical girls identified Krivosky and McDonnell as two of their assailants. The men were then charged with assault and attempted assault.
 The girls are badly beaten. Their faces are swollen with blows and their eyes puffed and blackened. Their condition is so serious that they will be confined to a hospital.
 The city authorities of Ogden are urging girls and young women, who are molested by auto drivers, to take the number of the cars and telephone them to the police station. And any man who witnesses any of these irregular acts is invited to aid the police in gaining clues to the maschers, before Ogden is the scene of a horrible outrage such as occurred in San Francisco.

TRYING TO SETTLE JAPANESE QUESTION.
 Every day the Japanese problem has assumed larger proportions, until now the federal government is required to take a stand which may be nothing less than an exclusion act barring the Japanese in much the same manner as the Chinese are excluded.
 Looking to this end a new treaty now is being negotiated, the tentative draft of which has proved objectionable to the leaders of the California movement to restrict the Japanese.
 Secretary of State Colby is carrying on the exchange of views with Tokio, but is leaving the final determination of policy to the time when he shall bring in the foreign affairs and foreign relations committee of congress.

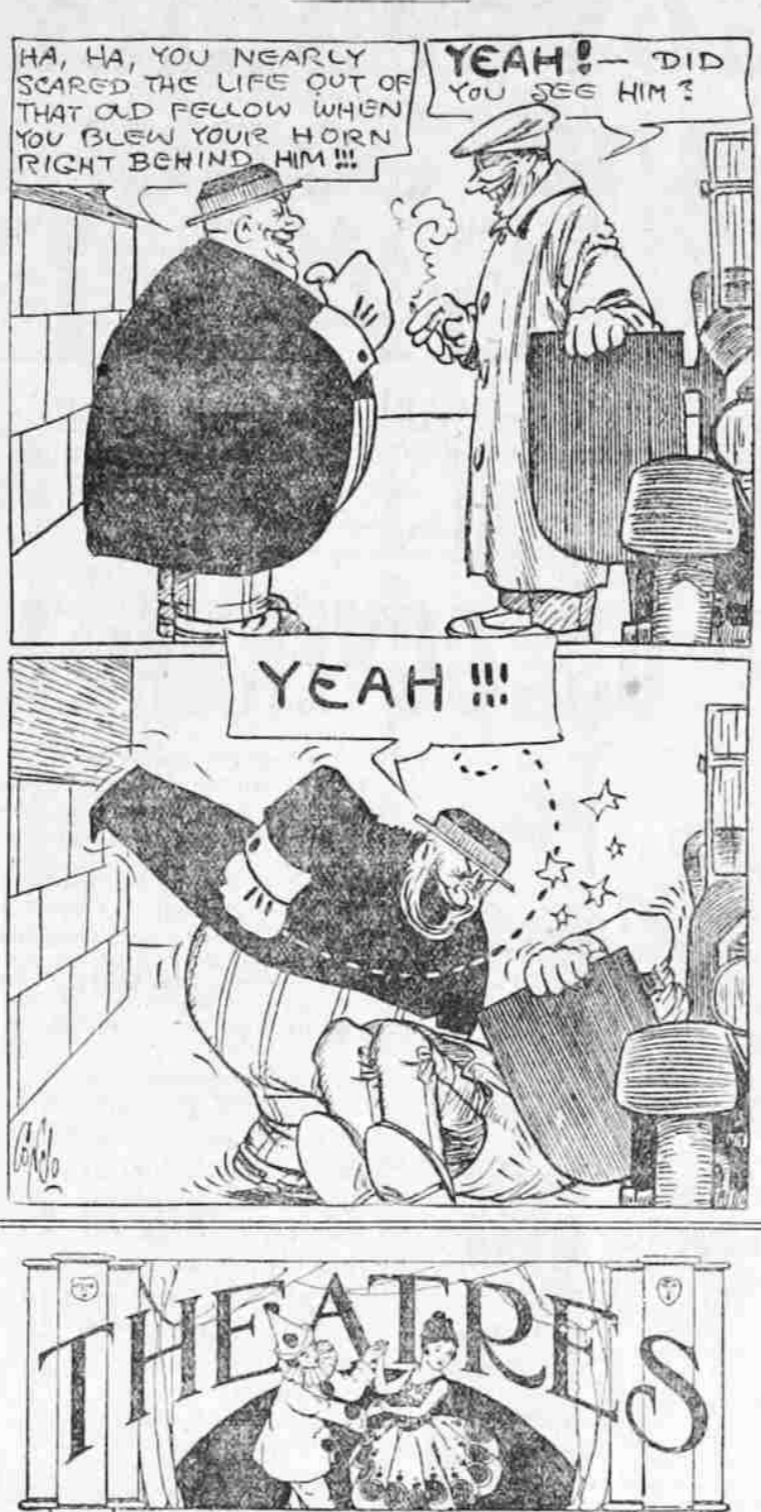

Inasmuch as the new administration will be entrusted with the working out of the difficulties, Secretary Colby should consult President-elect Harding and the Republican leaders and get their views before committing the country to an agreement with Japan.
 Congressman Johnson of Washington objects to leaving the control of Japanese immigration to the Japanese government and contends that the Nipponese never can be excluded effectively until the United States exercises its proper prerogative in this respect. If the treaty conflicts, he contends it should be terminated, as provided, on six months' notice. He also objects to any bargain with the Japanese involving an American guarantee of the right of Japanese now in this country to hold agricultural land.

Representative Kahn of California will present the Japanese problem to the house next week in a speech in which he will contend that the gentlemanly agreement entered into by Theodore Roosevelt has failed to prevent the influx of a horde of Japanese. Representatives Siegel of New York and Welby of Ohio, members of the committee, are in Canada investigating the smuggling of Asiatics across the international boundary, to deal with which there is to be a provision in the immigration bill.
 The entire decision in the Japanese affairs should rest with the committee of congress charged with responsibility in foreign relations.

COMING TO AMERICA BY THE MILLIONS.
 Foreigners are pouring into the United States at the rate of over a million a year.
 When there was work for all and efficiency was at low ebb, the tide of emigration was not a source of concern except as it related to the constantly growing colonies in the larger cities of people unable to read or write the English language or intelligently participate in the duties of citizenship.
 Senator Sterling of South Dakota, realizing the seriousness of the situation, has announced that he will introduce a bill in congress, creating a federal immigration board with power over all questions relating to immigration and including the right to decide the number of immigrants to be admitted to the country.
 This is one of the biggest problems before the congress of the United States. More than one-third of all the people in New York state are foreign born. In New York city whole districts are occupied by foreigners who are as foreign to American customs as they were the day they arrived at Ellis Island.
 Ten years ago Chicago had 781,000 foreign-born residents. To allow this stream of foreigners to continue to flow in upon us would be a wrong to be atoned for later on.

GIFT OF MILLIONAIRE.
 TOKIO, Oct. 25.—(Correspondence.)—Lively interest has been created throughout Japan by the announcement that Jiro Harada, a septuagenarian of Osaka, has given his entire property amounting to the equivalent of $10,000,000 for public education and general charities, a most unusual act on the part of a Japanese millionaire.

OUTBURSTS OF EVERET TRUE

"Restless Sex" Proves Pleasing to Crowd at the Alinambra

The combination of Robert W. Chambers, author, Marion Davies, star, and Joseph Urban, famous designer of settings, is successful in "The Restless Sex" in producing a picture that is notable for its lavishly artistic backgrounds and lively romance. The photography pleased the audience last evening at the Alinambra theatre. It will be seen today and tomorrow.
 Feminism is the underlying note of "The Restless Sex," though there is nothing in the picture about votes for women. It is rather the modern woman's craving for excitement and ambition to become more than just a wife. The heroine is a society girl of this type and her turbulent course to peace and happiness forms the theme of the story.
 Miss Davies is ideally suited to portray a Chambers heroine and her supporting cast, headed by Ralph Kellard and Caryle Blackwell, is an unusually competent one. An elaborate ball-room scene, in which over six hundred costumed people take part, is a feature. The picture is a Cosmopolitan Production for Paramount release and was directed by Robert Z. Leonard.

"Nightie Night," Farce at the Orpheum Tomorrow, Based on Actual Incident

Adelaide Matthews and Mrs. Martha M. Stanley, the authors of "Nightie Night," produced by Adolph Klosser, have a tale to unfold concerning the writing of the farce, which will be seen at the Orpheum theatre one night, Wednesday, December 1.
 "And," says Mrs. Stanley, "it has the merit of being true. It is the story that actually suggested the situation in which Trixie, the sub-heroine, of 'Nightie Night,' finds herself at the end of the first act, when, having rented an apartment in good faith, she finds it inhabited by folks who wholly misunderstand her motive in having become their tenant."
 "Like all originals, the original story isn't one bit like its finish in 'Nightie Night,' but what suggested Trixie's present predicament was the experience of a friend of ours, who left the city for several months. His wife found their apartment too lonely, and so moved to a hotel, suitting her rooms. Her letter to her husband about her change of address failed to reach him before his unexpected return to New York. He arrived late at night, reached his apartment, inserted his latchkey and was confronted in his own hallway by a strange man. The subsequent explanations made a scene that could only be appreciated by those who have listened to the picturesque reasonings of Billy and Trixie, in 'Nightie Night.'"
 When we adopted the situation to our farce, the characters were necessarily swapped about to a considerable extent. It is a woman instead of a man who innocently rents the apartment. The human interest of the scene in which the owner and the tenant discover that they are old friends naturally suggested itself. All we had to do was to add a dash of romance and a novel development to the revised situation—and there's the complete farce. Seats are going fast, get yours now.

Champion Globe Trotter to Show Films at Ogden Tonight

Captain Walter Wanderwell, Anzac veteran, globe trotter and post-translator of transients, is in Ogden for the completion of his third "round the world" tour, and to start to make his record of seven times around the world.
 A total of 109,000 miles has been covered by foot and machine by the Anzac and his party. The machine in which they are traveling is of special interest, being constructed from parts of more than fifty different makes of cars. It carries one square spoked wheel which was made in Mexico after an accident.
 Some of the members of the party have been on continuous travel for eight years, excepting time spent in the army. Another member was added to the party recently: Miss Dagmar Stevens of Berkeley. The party now includes Captain Wanderwell, his wife, Ruby Klass, Walter Roth and Al Nelson.

 The party hopes to complete 175,000 miles of hiking and motoring by 1923. To date, Captain Wanderwell has walked 65,000 miles. Miss Klass has been going for sixteen months and the others vary from one to four years.
 Captain and Mrs. Wanderwell spent their honeymoon walking across the continent.
 The party will show moving pictures taken on their trip at the Ogden theatre today.

Famous Blackface Stars and Big Show Please Ogden Theatregoers

It had been seven years since McIntyre and Heath played in Ogden, but nearly everybody in last night's audience surely will know it is worth while attending this evening's production to find out.
 McIntyre and Heath's dialogue retains its rich originality and smashing effect, their wit and witlessness, their chortles last night's yarn about the goofs feathers, the souseberries and the champagne fountain in the rock candy cave which bubbles into a golden gourd.
 The great many theatregoers who were at the Orpheum theatre last night wonder what goofs feathers are. Heath wears his sandy raiment to the same advantage as yore and McIntyre still listens to the lure of the minstrel show and hungrily greets it in the second act.
 But good as are the two blackface stars, there are plenty of other good features to "Hello Alexander." Some of the hard show dancers have been, and the answer is that they are in "Hello Alexander." There's quite a parcel of 'em there and a couple of soft shoe dancers, also.
 "Hello Alexander" contains a tabloid minstrel show that is a dandy. Then there are two or three vaudeville specialties of a high order. There are plenty of pretty girls and some stunning costumes. O. yes. Get a seat on the isle, and a pretty girl will reward you. The girls did it to quite a few last night and everybody enjoyed it except the fellows who got powder in their eyes and noses.
 You'll be glad to see McIntyre and Heath tonight for it might be more years before they come again.

"Deep Waters," Sea Story, Screened by Maurice Tourneur

Maurice Tourneur has made his chief reputation with sea pictures. When he offers a photoplay with the ocean as its background, everybody knows that he will give the best possible pictures. His pictures are always admirably interesting, and "Deep Waters," which opens Sunday at the Alinambra theatre.
 Tourneur has correctly fashioned his photoplay after the New England coast life, with characterizations here and there that bring laughs, tears, and then giggles. He has touched all of life's emotions, and yet not one is shown more than necessary. Jack Gilbert, one of the young screen writers, has moulded a scenario from the book that takes one from the rush of every day life back to the simple existence of these plain people in a hazy past.
 The picture is also spectacular, for it brings in a few thrills and some exciting moments. It has a big shipwreck, builders' troubles at the light-house site, on the rugged point, a storm at night, and numerous other absorbing episodes.
 A hatchery with a capacity of 16,000 eggs will be used by a poultry products company in Montana.

Wanderwell World Tour in film and in person at the Ogden Theatre today and tomorrow in addition to the greatest super-feature of the season.

MURDER CASE WITNESS TAKEN

Recognized by Pittsburg Detective as He Makes Complaint of Theft

PITTSBURG, Nov. 30.—Jack Moss of Philadelphia, was arrested Monday and according to the police is being held in connection with the killing of Henry T. Peirce, in his apartment at Philadelphia two weeks ago. Clyde S. Edeburn, captain of detectives, announced that Moss had told him that he was present when Peirce was killed, but that the prisoner said he had no actual part in the killing.
 Moss came to Pittsburg with a man named Williams last Tuesday and registered at the hotel. Williams secured a position as clerk in the hotel, and when he disappeared today Moss missed his overnight and reported the case to the authorities.
 While lodging his complaint a detective is said to have recognized him as answering the description of one of the suspects in the Peirce case, four missing front teeth being the main link in the identification.
 He was arrested and after a brief interrogation, Captain Edeburn announced that the prisoner had admitted he was in Peirce's apartment when the killing took place but said he had taken no part in the actual killing.
 When first questioned, Captain Edeburn said, Moss told him that Treadway had hit Peirce with the butt of a pistol as the party entered the latter's apartment, but later, in a written statement, had changed his story and accused a man named "Al," of striking the blow.

HUNGARY MAY ENFORCE RIGID CENSORSHIP LAW

VIENNA, Nov. 30.—(By the Associated Press.)—Information reaching foreign diplomatic officials here is to the effect that Hungary is attempting the enactment of a rigorous law for the suppression of the dissemination outside of that country of all news considered derogatory to the interests of the government.
 Foreign correspondents violating this law, it is added, will be subject to expulsion. It is understood that the foreign correspondents at Budapest have notified the government that if such a law is enacted they will leave in a body and make a world wide protest.

SCIENTIFIC MAKING OF DIAMONDS HELD FAILURE

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The latest effort of scientists to manufacture genuine diamonds has resulted in failure, according to an announcement Monday by William I. Rosenfeld, vice president of the American Jewelry Protective committee and director of the Jewelers' Vigilant committee.
 The committee, he said, after an exhaustive investigation of the reported discovery of a diamond-making formula by a German scientist, is convinced that the formula will not produce genuine gems.
 For renewing the depleted dairy of Germany, 35,000 head of Texas cows are to be sent there.
