PORTUGAL MAY ALLOW ROYAL EXILES TO RETURN

LISBON, Dec. 6.—Agitation for and against amnesty for monarchists and other political prisoners has aroused sharp discussion throughout Portugal. The movement in favor of granting amnesty was brought more emphatically to the public notice the other day by the announcement of Senator Jacinto Nunes that he would withdraw from his seat in parliament until amnesty was granted to political prisoners. Many of these have been imprisoned for nearly two years.

Senator Nunes has been elected a member of the senate ever since the proclamation of the republic in Portugal and his republicanism is considered unimpeachable.

The Seculo reports that the political exiles in France and Spain are preparing to present to the Portuguese legations in those countries statements promising that they will never again promote or participate in political insurrectionary movements in Portugal and that they consider such actions harmful to the national interest.
