

CHESTER STORY
DETECTIVE YARN

Recapture of Alleged Slayer Likely to Cause Uproar in Political Circles

By MABEL ABBOTT
N. E. A. Staff Correspondent.
KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 8.— Here's a corker of a detective story, fellows. And it's true! It's still happening, and nobody knows how it's going to end, or whether the villain is really the villain, or anything; but it's got a soldier horse doctor hero, and a man-hunt with bloodhounds and airplanes, and more thrills than a Bill Hart movie.

It's like this, so far, though there may be a new chapter before you have finished reading it.

SHOT WHILE MOTORING

Florence Barton, Kansas City society girl, and Howard Winter, her fiance, driving near Hillcrest Country club on the night of October 2, were shot by one of three men in another automobile. Winter was slightly wounded.
Miss Barton died on the way to a hospital.

Private detectives and the city force were put on the job of finding the murderer. After a month's chase through Arizona and California, Denzel Chester, 27, blacksmith, was arrested in Great Falls, Mont., where he was lured to a roominghouse by letters signed with the name of a woman whose love letters had been found among his belongings.

On the train, Chester was put in a stateroom. E. E. Beasley, police detective, sat in the room with him. Outside sat two detectives from a private agency. Beasley afterward said Chester's handcuffs had been removed to let him eat lunch and shave, and because he was treating him well to get him to answer questions.

Suddenly, as the train pulled out of Broken Bow, Neb., there was a crash of glass, a volley of shots, and Beasley dashed out of the stateroom shouting:
"My God! Dennis! Jumped out of the window!"

The train was stopped but of Chester, who was supposed to have dived through two heavy panes of plate glass, there was no trace save a hair with a bullet hole in it.

PEEL MAN-HUNT

Followed the man-hunt that the whole middle west will always remember. It was freezing weather and Chester was hatless and coatless.

Bloodhounds were put on the trail.
Officers took trains in all directions.
Miss Barton's two brothers and Winter scoured the country in automobiles.
John Hagan, superintendent of the detective agency, hovered over the results in an airplane.

Rewards totalling $16,700 had been offered. But the prairie seemed to have opened and swallowed Dennis Chester.

Almost exhausted, Barton, Hagan and a deputy sheriff named Hammond got a fresh tip, Nov. 19, that Chester was near Oconto, Neb. It was 3 o'clock in the morning, but out they went again. And just then arrived the hero, Dr. Martin Hanson, over six feet tall, 34 years old, a state lieutenant in the Veterinary Corps during the war.
He had been treating a sick horse all night, and he volunteered to help in the search.

MEET HIM ON ROAD

About noon, Hanson and Hammond driving together, met a man in khaki uniform.

"How far to Oconto?" asked Hanson, jumping out.

"Oh, five or six miles," replied the man.

Hanson's revolver was already against his stomach. "Harris up," he ordered, and they went up. It was Denzel Chester.

In the Broken Bow jail, late that afternoon, Chester, free strings from his blanket, knotted them about his throat and had almost strangled himself before he was found. Early next morning, despite the guard watching him, he suddenly stood up at his cot and dived headlong to the cement floor.

BAFFLES DOCTORS
And here, instead of ending begins the really puzzling part of Chester's adventures.

Between attempts at suicide he has lain limp, apparently helpless and absolutely speechless staring at the ceiling or the light. Examinations by many doctors, including a neurologist and an X-ray expert, fail to show any injury from his attempts at suicide, or any reason why he should not speak or walk if he wishes. The doctors believe he is shamming.

He was carried to the train shackled with a stretcher. In Kansas City he is in a steel room in a hospital, under heavy guard. After a long period here of helplessness, Chester made a third attempt at suicide. He tried to butt out his brains on the bars of his cell when the guard looked away.

Meanwhile, many things have been going on. It is whispered that money without limit will be available in the dark places of Kansas City's dens and dives, to help Chester.

JEPPERSON FAVORED FOR PLACE ON UTAH QUINTET

Wayne Jeppson, now a freshman at the University of Utah, formerly a Weber Normal student, is mentioned as a possible varsity basketball player.
The following is quoted from the University paper:

"Jeppson's work at guard was one of the strongest factors that brought the championship to Weber in 1919, when the tourney was staged in the 'U' gym. As Weber did not play in the state tourney last year, Jeppson did not gain a position on the all-star five."
