AIR TAXI DRIVER SUES FOR BILL

Nebraska Banker Got Cold Feet When Aviator Took Tail Spin

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 9.—C. E. Hoyt, 57, banker at Whitman, Neb., visited in Omaha and while waiting away his time waiting for his train saw Pilot Arthur E. Adkinson "charging" around in the air. The banker immediately had an inspiration to make the natives in his home town "feel up" and take notice and hurried to the landing field where he employed the bird-man to take him and a companion home. The price for the trip was to be $500.

At Grand Island, due to engine trouble, the pilot was forced into a tail spin. The sudden drop caused the banker's feet to chill. A branch line train en route to his home town stood on the track nearby and as the aviator repaired his engine, his passengers started home on the main line.

The above allegations were made in a suit for $500 air taxi bill filed in district court by Whitman. It is the first suit of its kind in the state.

Mr. Garner said today that inasmuch as he is of the same political faith as the incoming administration, he does not believe that his appointment will be thrown out. In case he is included in the blanket defeat of President Wilson's nominations, he will again file application for the postmastership he said.
