Christmas at Olmstead.

The customary Christmas festival was held by the Telluride Institute at Olmstead. It was thought by many that the decorations of last year would be hard to equal, but those of this year were fully as good. The large quarters building which is used as a school and quarters for the institute boys, was the scene of the greatest gaiety. Rooms were appropriately and profusely decorated with evergreen, holly and mistletoe. Probably the most elaborate arrangement was the basement of the quarters building, where a ten-course banquet was served. The large room was lined by banks of evergreen and the tables were decorated with tea roses and carnations. The dinner was prepared by Salt Lake chefs, and the Mozart orchestra was in attendance. One hundred and fifteen people, coming from Telluride works in Idaho, Colorado and Utah, were seated. During the banquet Professor Thornhill read telegrams of congratulation from members who could not be present. Among these were by Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Quinn, second highest, by Mr. and Mrs. V. B. Jones, and the booby prizes by C. L. Countryman and Mrs. A. T. Williams.
