

The Salt Lake Tribune.

The Wants will bring congenial boarders and roomers to the home.

WEATHER TODAY.
Local rain Saturday; Sunday probably fair.
Salt Lake Metal Prices.
Silver .60%
Gold $4.20
Wheat (St. Louis) $6.60 to $6.90
Copper $15.70

OL. LXXXV., NO. 13.

SALT LAKE CITY, SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 27, 1912.

14 PAGES—FIVE CENTS

TAFT CHEERED WILDLY AS HE FIGHTS BACK

Heart Cheers for Roosevelt Transformed Into Capturous Enthusiasm for President. "Don't Let Him Get Away Now You Have Him Going" About Hearers; Charges Roosevelt With Ambition to Be Nation's Dictator.

REVEALS FOLLY OF TAVEL'S DOCTRINES

What He Advocates Can't Be Achieved in Four Years," Says Taft, and Asks: "And If Not, When It Means Another Term, and Two More Terms. If He Is Necessary Now, Why Not Later?"

NEWARK, N. J., April 26.—"I didn't seek this. I am forced against the wall—with my back to it—and I am bound, if I have any manhood at all in me, to fight."

Colonel Roosevelt left here after his speech for Boston, where he will start tomorrow on a whirlwind campaign of the state.

When the colonel stepped on the stage the crowd cheered him wildly for a minute.

Early in his speech Colonel Roosevelt took up the break in friendship between President Taft and himself, saying:

ROOSEVELT IN FRANTIC TALK ABUSES TAFT

"He Wanted War; I Am Going to Give It To Him," He Rages. Denounces President of United States in Frenzied Terms, But Fails to Answer the Charges Against Himself.

LAME EXCUSE FOR RECIPROCITY FLOP

Again Says Taft Favored Lorimer, Yet Gives Not the Slightest Proof; Concedes That President Means Well; Is Silent on Morgan's Influence Over Himself.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 26.—"Throwing restraint to the winds, Colonel Roosevelt here tonight scolded President Taft mercilessly for the president's bitter attack upon him."

Roosevelt kept his word. He took up the gauntlet hurled by the president and scoured him with a violence that made his audience wince. It was a vitriolic, vicious attack.

The colonel plunged into his denunciation of the president before a howling crowd of 5000 in Mechanics hall. Outside, the hall were 5000 more who vainly struggled to get in.

In caustic phrase the furious Roosevelt branded Taft's administration as a failure, saying he failed to comprehend what the nation wanted. He accused the president of having committed an "unpardonable sin for any man calling himself a gentleman," in having resorted to confidential correspondence to assail him.

Colonel Roosevelt left here after his speech for Boston, where he will start tomorrow on a whirlwind campaign of the state.

When the colonel stepped on the stage the crowd cheered him wildly for a minute.

RICH WIDOW TO MARRY MORRIS CALMLY AWAITING FATE UPON SCAFFOLD

MRS. WYLIE REYNOLDS.

WIDOW WINS SUIT TO SET ASIDE WILL

Culmination of Fight Between Wife and Daughter of Collins L. Balch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Mrs. Georgia C. Balch, widow of Collins L. Balch, a wealthy manufacturer of celluloid, today won the will contest that she brought against her daughter, Grace C. Balch.

SUTHERLAND INVITED TO DELIVER ORATION

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Senator Sutherland has been invited to deliver one of the Memorial day addresses at Arlington cemetery on May 30.

MISS JUDITH RICE IS ON ROAD TO RECOVERY

BOSTON, Mass., April 26.—Miss Judith Rice of Salt Lake, the artist's model, who attempted to commit suicide in a room at the Parker house last Sunday by shooting herself in the breast, is slowly rallying from the effects of the wound, and at the Grace hospital it was said she would probably recover.

Salt Laker in New York. Special to The Tribune. NEW YORK, April 26.—Herald Square, J. H. Horlick, Dr. M. R. Stewart, Waldorf, M. H. Kirk.

MORRIS CALMLY AWAITING FATE UPON SCAFFOLD

Slayer of J. Walter Axtell Declares He Will "Die Game" if He Is Hanged Next Tuesday.

NEITHER HOPEFUL NOR DESPONDENT

Refuses to Talk When Asked if He Expects to Meet Victim in the Next World.

J. MORRIS, who will be executed next Tuesday, unless the board of pardons or the governor of Utah interpose some stay, is a problem for the student of criminology.

Neither in attitude, tone nor gesture was there any indication of clinging desperately to a last straw of hope that he might secure a reprieve or a commutation of sentence; nor, on the other hand, was there to be seen any of the palpable bravado that marked the demeanor of Frank Rose, the barber who eight years ago, while intoxicated, killed his wife and continued his spree, leaving their infant son alone by the body of the dead mother.

Not Like Mortensen.

Nor did the condemned man in any wise suggest the attitude assumed by Peter Mortensen, who a year before Rose was executed paid the death penalty for the murder of James Hay, his brother in the Mormon church and a fellow Sunday school teacher.

Forces a Smile.

Morris smiled, but the smile seemed forced, and yet when his smile vanished there was no expression of pain or anguish. With an air of attention he waited quietly for the first question:

"Mr. Morris," said the interviewer, "it is the custom of a newspaper to afford to the man who is facing death"

The Sunday Tribune

SECRETS BEHIND THE SCENES—Actress paints a sad picture of stage life as told in "My Actor Husband," a new and vivid autobiography by a woman who hides her name.

PRINCE PIGNATELLI—He wins a $60,000,000 heiress. Miss Mary Duke, daughter of the tobacco trust king, adds a new kind of matrimonial alliance to the remarkable family collection.

SNOWSHOEING IN THE WASATCH—J. Cecil Alter writes a thrilling story of winter climbing in the Wasatch range. This story is handsomely illustrated with pictures taken by himself.

PARALLEL STORIES—"The Loot of the Kingston National" is the theme of the detective story this week.

BOX SCORES of big league and Union league games, as well as the fullest reports received in Salt Lake of all minor leagues.

MOTHER CHAINS HER CHILD TO FLOOR

Police Rescue Nine-Year-Old Boy When Neighbors Tell Them of His Plight.

WOMAN JUSTIFIES ACT

Declares She Was Acting Under Command of God in So Shackling Son.

Chained to the floor by means of a dog leash, the steel collar of which had chafed his little throat until the tender flesh was raw, Roy Winegar, aged 9 years, was rescued by the police last night from the hands of his frenzied mother, Mrs. M. Winegar, 644 North Second West street, who told the officers she was acting under divine authority when she imprisoned the child.

Attracted by piteous cries of the little fellow, neighbors of Mrs. Winegar telephoned the police and Officers Husbands, Sullivan and Sergeant Siegfus went to the scene. They found the woman, Bible in hand, reading aloud from the ancient prophets. In one corner was the chained boy, straining at the end of a three-foot leash that was fastened by means of staples to the floor. Three other children, the oldest 14 years of age, were in the room.

When the officers asked why she had chained the boy, Mrs. Winegar replied that God had given her instructions how to rear her children, and that the hand of man must not interfere. To substantiate her claim, she read a passage from the Bible wherein it is set down that parents shall chastise their offspring as they see fit, even to placing them in chains.

The officers made no attempt to take the children from her, though the juvenile court officers were notified of the affair and an investigation will be made by them today.

DOZEN PERSONS HURT IN KANSAS TORNADO

KANSAS CITY, April 26.—More than a dozen persons were badly injured, several fatally, in a tornado which devastated southeast Kansas last night. The greatest damage was done ten miles southwest of Neodesha, Kan.

The mother of Leo Pittman was killed, while Pittman received fatal injuries. A girl and a boy who lived at the Lapsley home received fatal injuries. The tornado completely destroyed the town of Quaker. Several members of the family of Frank Likes were fatally injured. A grove of two acres of large maple trees was uprooted and twisted into a tangled mass of debris, in the center of which was interwoven the wreckage of three farm dwelling houses.

The storm exacted a toll of one life at Sedan and injured a dozen persons, three fatally. Houses, barns, churches and school buildings were destroyed.

Rushed to Her Doom.

The Californian, no Wireless Operator Evans testified, had at 9 o'clock on the evening of the catastrophe informed the Titanic that ice was all about. For reply, he got "Shut up! We are busy talking to Cape Race." Thus it has been made clear that, lying all about the ill-fated leviathan there were vessels not only ready and willing to come to her aid, but actually warning her of the danger she was in. But the Titanic rushed on toward the iceberg that was to destroy her, and because the smaller ships could not afford extra operators at $20 a month apiece, her frantic C. Q. D. was flashed into dead receivers and her passengers and crew perished needlessly in the icy sea.

The Californian had been gossiping with many other ships, all of them within the danger zone. The Frankfurt was within a few miles of her and so was the Mount Temple, although there is no record that she spoke the latter vessel. But the small steamers only carried one operator, and in the real hours of part they were as useless as if they had been on the opposite side of the earth.

Panic On Titanic. In the testimony of Able Seaman Evans, which was taken late in the afternoon, the story was told of what approached very near panic while the boats were being lowered on the Titanic.

WIRELESS MEN ASLEEP OR OFF DUTY AT NIGHT

Several Smaller Vessels Within Easy Reach of the Titanic When the Leviathan of the Deep Rushed to Her Doom in the Field of Ice in the Darkness of Night.

CALIFORNIAN WAS WITHIN 20 MILES

Donkey Engineer's Story of Seeing Signals of Distress Confirmed by Evidence of Captain Lord; Vice President Franklin Admits Holding Back News.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Fifteen minutes before the Titanic sent her cry for help across the north Atlantic the wireless operator of the Californian, which lay quietly in an icefield less than twenty miles away, slipped the receivers from his ears, pulled off his clothes and turned into his berth.

Off Duty at Night.

This testimony, which confirms the affidavit of Donkey Engineer Gill of the Californian, first published by the International News Service, was given by Captain Lord of the Californian, and Cyril Evans, his wireless man, before the senate sub-committee today. It establishes beyond question the fact that on small vessels the wireless men are asleep or off duty before the hours of darkness that are most perilous to steamships.

Another Vessel Close.

It was also brought out in the testimony that within four miles of the Californian, between her and the Titanic, lay still another vessel. The Californian sought to communicate with her, but got no response and she finally, according to the testimony of Captain Lord, hailed off to the southwest.

Rushed to Her Doom.

The Californian, no Wireless Operator Evans testified, had at 9 o'clock on the evening of the catastrophe informed the Titanic that ice was all about. For reply, he got "Shut up! We are busy talking to Cape Race." Thus it has been made clear that, lying all about the ill-fated leviathan there were vessels not only ready and willing to come to her aid, but actually warning her of the danger she was in. But the Titanic rushed on toward the iceberg that was to destroy her, and because the smaller ships could not afford extra operators at $20 a month apiece, her frantic C. Q. D. was flashed into dead receivers and her passengers and crew perished needlessly in the icy sea.

The Californian had been gossiping with many other ships, all of them within the danger zone. The Frankfurt was within a few miles of her and so was the Mount Temple, although there is no record that she spoke the latter vessel. But the small steamers only carried one operator, and in the real hours of part they were as useless as if they had been on the opposite side of the earth.

Panic On Titanic. In the testimony of Able Seaman Evans, which was taken late in the afternoon, the story was told of what approached very near panic while the boats were being lowered on the Titanic.