Bowels Get Weak As Age Advances

The First Necessity Is to Keep the Bowels Gently Open With a Mild Laxative Tonic.

Healthy old age is so absolutely dependent upon the condition of the bowels that great care should be taken to see that they act regularly. The fact is that as age advances the stomach muscles become weak and inactive and the liver does not store up the juices that are necessary to prompt digestion.

Some help can be obtained by eating easily digested foods and by plenty of exercise, but this latter is irksome to most elderly people. One thing is certain, that a state of constipation should always be avoided as it is dangerous to life and health. The best plan is to take a mild laxative as often as is deemed necessary. But with equal certainty it is suggested that cathartics, purgatives, physics, salts and pills be avoided, as they do but temporary good and are so harsh as to be a shock to a delicate system.

A much better plan, and one that thousands of elderly people are following, is to take a gentle laxative-tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which acts as nearly like nature as is possible. In fact, the tendency of this remedy is to strengthen the stomach and bowel muscles and so train them to act naturally again, when medicines of all kinds can usually be dispensed with. This is the opinion of many people of different ages, among them Mr. O. P. Miller, Baroda, Mich., who writes: "I am 80 years old and have been constipated for many years. Since receiving your sample bottle I have procured two 50c bottles and find that it is the best remedy I ever used and does just what you claim for it to the very letter. I can not recommend it too highly."

A bottle can be bought of any druggist at 50 cents or $1. People usually buy the 50c size first, and then, having convinced themselves of its merits they buy the $1 size, which is more economical. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded. Any elderly person can follow these suggestions with safety and the assurance of good results.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington street, Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

CAN'T USE ROSE BRAND ON PICKLES

Court Grants a Restraining Order in Favor of Goddard Company.

In the case of the Goddard Pickle & Preserve company against the Rose Pickle & Vinegar company, J. C. Rose and J. T. Keith, which has been pending in the Third judicial district court since last October, and which occasioned considerable comment at the time the suit was filed, and which is an action involving an alleged infringement of a trademark known as the Rose brand of pickles, vinegar, chowchows, olives, etc., the court at a hearing yesterday granted a restraining order in favor of the Goddard company against all of the defendants, restraining them from manufacturing, processing, bottling, putting up in bottles or packages, keeping, offering for sale, using or selling any of their products containing the trademarks, labels or brands known as the "Rose Brand" or "Rose's," or containing a picture of a rose in connection with such brands, or in any other form which is a colorable imitation of plaintiff's products.

The injunction was entered upon a statement of the facts by counsel for the plaintiff. The defendants were present, but no objection was made to the entry of the order.

How the $5,060 Booklovers' Contest Pictures Are Made

Read this and you'll know how to unravel all of them!

If you know how the pictures in the Booklovers' Contest game are made you'll know better how to get at the title each one represents, won't you?

Here's how they are made. The Tribune wants you to know all about this game—it's a fair, square game, and we are being frank:

Three of The Tribune staff, one of whom is the staff member who has been appointed Booklovers' Contest editor, have been given the responsible duty of selecting three-quarters of the 77 book titles that the 77 contest pictures represent. Each of these three men selects about one-quarter of the 77 titles, and the publisher himself selects the rest.

The 77 titles to be represented by the pictures are all selected from an official list of about 5000 book titles. This catalogue was compiled for this contest and all the 5000 book titles contained in it are arranged carefully in proper alphabetical order. The publisher of The Tribune took one of the catalogues and tore it into three sections.

"I want each of you," he said to the three men, "to select one-quarter of the 77 titles. Select titles that lend themselves to being represented fully and clearly by drawings. Each of you has a different section of the catalogue, so you cannot repeat one another in the titles you select. After selecting your titles and having had the pictures drawn to represent them, you are to hand them to me and I will seal them in an envelope and keep them in my private safe. You are on your honor not to communicate with one another, or to tell anyone else anything at all about these titles, and I will guard the complete list as I guard the honor and good name of this newspaper. No breath of suspicion must concern itself with this great contest. It is unique in that it is a free game, with none of the usual contest drudgery, and let none of you by any indiscretion discredit this contest and this newspaper."

So each of the three men does not know what titles the others have selected, nor does he care, for the three are long tried and well proven men of integrity, who hold the good name of this newspaper sacred above all things.

But the publisher, to make assurance doubly sure, himself attends to the selection of the final one-quarter of the 77 titles.

Each of the men selects his quota of titles, numbers them properly and turns them in to the publisher. On a separate piece of paper each man writes a description of the pictures he wishes drawn to represent each title he has chosen. The descriptions are numbered to correspond to the titles.

The numbered descriptions are then turned over to a member of The Tribune art staff and he draws the pictures according to the directions given. Each picture must be drawn to fit its title as a glove fits the hand, so in nearly every case the artist is required by the man who selects the title to alter the drawing in some way until it fits the title fully and clearly and honestly. Yet the descriptions given the artists are so carefully worded that he could never get even a hint from them as to what book titles he is representing by the drawings he makes. The artist simply draws to order.

Read tomorrow's Tribune to learn about how YOU can get that list of 5000 book titles containing the 77 correct titles!

With that in your possession you can solve each picture, if you use your native shrewdness. No book knowledge is required if you have the actual 77 correct titles listed in a booklet always at your disposal!
