

CODE NAPOLEAN COVERS PROPOSED LEGISLATION

Laws to Prevent the Formation and the Perpetuity of Immense Fortunes Enforced

FRANCE PROTECTS THE PEOPLE

What President Roosevelt Has Suggested Being Done "The Little Corporal" Did for His Countrymen and the Prosperity of That Nation Rests on His Acts.

There is a passage in Walter Bagehot's introduction to the second edition of his "English Constitution" which has some bearing upon President Roosevelt's recent suggestion of the desirability of limiting great fortunes, says the Minneapolis Tribune.

Speaking of the possibility that the British house of lords might some day be abolished, Mr. Bagehot said that if the house ever goes, "it will go in a storm, and the storm will not leave all else as it is. It will not destroy the house of peers and leave the rich-going peers with the wealth and titles to sit in the house of commons."

eldest son, it can descend to him by virtue of his father's will. In pursuance of the idea of keeping a great family fortune intact Commodore Vanderbilt, while making liberal provision for his other children, left by far the larger portion of his property to his son William H. Other millionaires have acted on the same principle, so that many great fortunes have been kept together in a number of families for several generations.

The power of the state to put some restraint upon the perpetuation of vast fortunes has been recognized in all governments. Death and succession taxes are collected in all European countries. There is apparently no limit to the power of governments to levy such taxes. But to carry them to the point of confiscation of estates would naturally rouse bitter protest from the property class.

Compulsory equal division among the children or heirs of like degree, according to the Code Napoleon, would in the long run effectually check the perpetuation of unwieldy fortunes. France has prospered under the system of division. It is doubtful if any other country of equal area and population could have successfully borne the financial burden that France has been called on to bear, in the Franco-Russian war, the German indemnity, the Panama canal losses and the huge loans to Russia and other countries. The division of lands and fortunes seems to be an incentive to universal thrift.

If President Roosevelt ever comes to formulate a concrete plan for minimizing the evils of overgrown private fortunes he may profitably study the principles of the Code Napoleon upon this head.

MILITARY COMPANIES GO TO PORTSMOUTH WEDNESDAY

Field Day at Ocean View After Unveiling of Army and Navy Monument.

The members of the Huntington Rifes, Company C, and the Newport News Light Infantry, Company G, have been ordered to assemble at the armory hall at 8 o'clock tomorrow night to perfect arrangements for turning out with the Seventy-first regiment to participate in the parade incident to the unveiling of the monument erected in Portsmouth to the army and navy.

Owing to the fact that both Captain Fitchett and First Lieutenant Garthwright, of Company G have tendered their resignations as officers of that company and that Second Lieutenant Raymond Butler is ill, the members of Company G will go to Portsmouth with Company C and under the command of Captain Wilkins, of the Huntington Rifles.

It is expected that the local companies will send almost a hundred men to Portsmouth and no doubt the two companies, marching as one, will be the largest company in the Seventy-first regiment.

After the parade and the unveiling of the monument the soldiers will go to Ocean View where the regiment and the Norfolk Young Men's Christian Association will hold field day sports.

A number of interesting athletic events have been arranged for the day and it is expected that a large crowd will be present there.

The local militiamen will return to this city late Wednesday night.

STOCKS AND BONDS

Traders Unload Holdings and Force Prices Lower.

NOT MUCH DOING ON 'CHANGE

Brokers Take Profits and Even Up Their Trades to Carry Over the Business Until Monday—Money Market Too, is Rather Quiet.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 26.—Traders who bought stocks on rise yesterday sold today to even up their contracts over Sunday. That was about all there was to the market, which was narrow and professional to the last degree.

The pressure on prices relaxed to some extent after the first hour under the influence of the firm tone in Pennsylvania, which did not share in the weakness of the general market.

Prices faded away again in the closing dealings and in some instances reached the lowest with the tone easy.

The bank returns showed a weakened position and had an unfavorable effect on speculative sentiment. The surplus over the legal requirement was shown to be $6,694,150.
