of the
HOUSEHOLD EFFECTS and PERSONAL PR of

Mrs. Harrison Phoebus

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10th

BEGINNING AT 11:00 O'CLOCK A. M.

IN order to close up the estate of Mrs. Phoebus, the Executors have determined to dispose of all the Household Furniture, Live stock, Farming Implements and other personal effects now at Roseland. As is well known the Furniture in the Phoebus home is of a very superior grade, including some of the rarest and richest pieces of bric-a-brac, pictures, Oil paintings, wardrobes, dressers, Brussel carpets, rugs, and, in fact, every article found in a thoroughly modern American home. This sale will offer an exceptional chance to the Peninsula people to purchase high class household goods at auction.

The farming implements are of the latest make, and farmers and truckers cannot afford to miss the opportunity offered them in this sale.

The live stock consists of 2 first-class coach horses. The fine family carriages, set of fine carriage harness and wagons, owned by Mrs. Phoebus, will be disposed of also.

She Saw the Joke.

"My mother is a dear old lady," said the professional jokesmith, "but she has no more sense of humor than an Egyptian mummy. The other day we were discussing a friend of the family, a certain Mr. Joblots, we will say, who keeps a book and stationery store. I remarked to her that Mr. Joblots seemed to be getting along very well in spite of the fact that he keeps stationary. 'Why shouldn't he?' she demanded. I repeated my jocular remark with emphasis and took great pains to explain to her the play on words. When I saw the point, which she eventually did, she shook all over like a bowl of hot soup and regarded me as a mad wag. 'Why didn't you say so before?' she said."
