

LIFE IN NEW YORK.

[N. Y. Cen. Nat. Intelligencer.]

A walk up Broadway will convince an earnest observer that though gold has "ris," and almost everything else nearly in proportion, that so have women, even to the emergency and awful crisis of having every thing, as they were wont to, in style. As handsome dresses are now worn, and as many of them as ever swept Broadway of its straws and dust in the palmiest days of commerce and no internal taxes; as handsome equipages roll along the fashionable streets, with liveried attendants, as ever made the world of show that attracted the attention and helped to enliven the visits of what we now know as Secession's wrongfully provisions are to be sold. Imported goods are forced, never very high; nearly double what they were before the war, yet they sell readily, and are worn as extensively, and displayed, in and out of every crowded thoroughfare, in as great abundance as in seasons gone by. Real summer costumes have begun to appear. Straw hats and linen coats are not out in "full feather" yet, but may be likened to a slight "snow" of them. Dress makers and milliners appear to be doing a thriving business in their particular branches of personal adornment, and the more fashionable ones of these classes in industry, say they are overrun with business—even to "disappointment," for some of the customers at least. It seems evident that some one—and this includes a very large class indeed—is making money, and spending it too. It is thought this will be one of the gayest seasons extant for many years, hence the "beggars" adds his mite, and his wife and children will appear before the reflectors of public fashion in costly fabrics that were heretofore known to them only in a very large glass window on some favorite and enticing promenade. There does not seem to be any "want" other than in and for that which it costs a good deal of money to make beneficial, either in worth or mere externality, to one or more particular "self." There is one fashion, the particular "rage" just now, and that is to trim the skirts of dresses with ribbon, cord, and &c., in embroidered forms, with braid and cord and in graceful forms with ribbon and other appropriate materials. The richest silks are actually loaded down with this kind of trimming, and many of them until they assume the appearance of the most costly "dress patterns."

Sidney Kirtland was lately arrested in New York by the Pro't. Marshal, whose return to the application for a writ of habeas corpus, sets forth that Kirtland has been for many years past a resident and citizen of the State of Alabama; that he left the said State recently, and without permission crossed the lines of the U. S. Army and came to New York, where he assumed a false name; that he was arrested upon the charge of being a Confederate spy; that it is the duty of the Provost Marshal to hold him for trial by the military authorities as a spy, and that if he is not a spy he should be held as a prisoner of war, subject to the said military authorities. The reply to this was a general denial, and the plea that if the prisoner took the oath he would lose his property in Alabama. Mr. McCunn, City Judge, decided that, as the prisoner has committed no offence, he must be discharged.

The Toronto (Canada) Board of trade on Tuesday, agreed to recommend to the merchants and traders of that city generally, to receive silver only at an increased discount. — "This step," says the Globe, "has been rendered necessary in consequence of the continued influx of American silver. And to so great an extent has this been the case that bank bills have become almost a curiosity."

The Washington Constitutional Union says: it "is rumored that Gen. Stoneman has resigned his command of the cavalry of the Army of the Potomac, and that Gen. Pleasanton, of Philadelphia, is to succeed him."

A most interesting relic of the olden time is now on exhibition in Providence, Rhode Island. It is the original deed for six hundred and twenty-five acres of land, on which now stands the city of Philadelphia, executed by William Penn to Thomas Vernon, March 3, 1631, immediately upon the receipt of Penn's patent from King Charles the Second.

The N. Y. World says, "the scenes attending the reception of the 37th and 38th regiments yesterday, furnished another instance of the remarkable devotion felt for the person of General McClellan by the Soldiers of the Army of the Potomac. So far, every regiment, without exception, which has returned has borne but one testimony—that General McClellan, and he alone, possesses the hearts of that army, and that his leadership would be of more value to it than a reinforcement of 50,000 men."

Colonel Birney, yesterday mustered in another company of colored soldiers, numbering eighty. He says the fourth company is in progress, and at a meeting last evening, he and others co-operating, urged the colored people to come up to fill the regiment, and then go on with another.

George Moore, the British Consul at Richmond, has been dismissed, for acting as consul beyond the confines of Virginia, and disregarding the authority of the Confederate government.

William F. Richstina, the bookseller of Washington, who was arrested a week or so since for disloyal sentiments, has been unconditionally released after examination into the case by the military authorities. Mr. R. was not aware at first of what he was arrested for or who were his accusers.

The indictment, in Washington, against Thornton A. Smith, for an attempt to bribe Col L. C. Baker, has been quashed by the Court.

American travellers are beginning to thicken in Paris; and among the notable is Mis Charlotte Cushman.

The latest theatrical novelty in London is found in the comic performances of M. Lavassor, from the Parisian boards, who has discovered and developed, strange as it may seem, the genuine humor of sea-sickness.

Rev. Dr. Gurley, of the New York Avenue Church, of Washington, has been appointed visitor to West Point.

It is understood that Admiral Dahlgren is to be second in command under Commodore Foote.

Several persons were arrested to-day, and fined for selling liquor.
