English Opinion.

[From the London journals, July 1st.]

The London Times says that Mr. Roebuck has failed to show that any good would ensue from the House adopting his motion. The speech of Mr. Gladstone, who opposed the motion, may be taken as an exposition of enlightened English opinion on the subject. He condemns the war, he condemns Mr. Lincoln's incitements to servile rebellion, but he denies that England and France can abate the miseries of the contest by such an act as the recognition of the South. He believes that the South can maintain its independence, and that it would be expedient for the Federals to desist from a hopeless and therefore an unjustifiable war. The Times says it is plainly our duty as well as our policy, to bear with this misguided people for some time longer.

The Telegraph says we simply await the arrival of that hour which shall show the South to be in possession of the independence it claims, and enables us to recognize it with the sanction of sound judgment and the fiat of public law.

The London News and Star abuse Mr. Roebuck. The Star says last night's debate will assuredly be regarded by the friends of peace between Europe and America, peace between North and South, and freedom in both, as an acquisition to their good cause.

The Standard ridicules the idea of withholding recognition of the South for fear of war with the North.

GENERAL LEE ON INVASION.—A correspondent of the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser, writing from Gettysburg, July 7, relates a talk between General Lee and a mill owner, of Pennsylvania, during the recent invasion:

"Gen. Lee's confiscation of paper at the mills near Mount Holly Springs has been mentioned. Mr. Givin, one of the sufferers, at whose house the General breakfasted, gives me some facts of interest. 'It is not that we love the Pennsylvanians,' observed Lee, 'that we refuse to let our men engage in plundering private citizens. We could not otherwise keep up the morale of the army. A rigid discipline must be maintained or the men would be worthless.'"

"I told General Lee," continued Mr Givin, "that the South must give it up; that the North would fight it out rather than see the country broken in two, and that their invasion of Pennsylvania was a great mistake." "What would you do," replied the General, "if you were in our place?" Here he produced copies of the Richmond papers, which complained so bitterly about the war being waged in the South, while it ought to be carried into the free States. One of the motives to this inroad was, therefore, the pressure of public opinion brought to bear on the Confederate Government by means of the newspapers."

A collier who had been lost four days in a coal mine in Derbyshire, England, was rescued the other day. His entire sustenance for ninety-one hours was the oil from his lamp, which he had sucked up. Although much exhausted when found, he soon revived, and, after a little food had been administered, he walked home.

THE RIOT IN NEW YORK,

NEW YORK, July 15, 10 a. m.—The wires of the Independent Telegraph Company east have been cut for several blocks by the mob.

One mob is now in Greenwich street, destroying houses of ill fame and gin mills.

The crowd and excitement continue on the Second avenue, near Forty-third street.

LATER.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Governor Seymour has issued a proclamation declaring the city of New York in a state of insurrection, and giving notice to all persons that the means provided by the law of this State for the maintenance of law and order will be employed to whatever degree may be necessary, and that all persons who shall, after the publication of this proclamation, resist or aid, or assist in resisting, any force ordered out by the Governor to quell or suppress such insurrection, will render themselves liable to the penalties prescribed by law.

The New Albany (Ind.) Ledger, of July 9th, says that a gentleman engaged in recruiting a Union company at Frankfort has reached Madison. He reports that three hundred Rebels entered Frankfort yesterday and seized the person of Hon. John J. Crittenden.

Reported Riot at Hartford.

SPRINGFIELD, (MASS.) July 13.—A riot has broken out in Hartford, and troops have been sent here to protect the armory and arsenal.—There is considerable excitement in this city.

Reported Resistance in Boston.

NEW YORK, July 14 P. M.—We have reports from Boston that a mob of one thousand men have assembled to resist the draft.

COMMUNICATED.

The variety of odors, arising from the gutters, yards, and cellars of Alexandria, at this particular time, far exceed in number and intensity those said by Coleridge to exist in Cologne, and which have made that city "famous." Thirty-six, I think, were enumerated. Here, however, there must be at least one hundred, all differing in degree, and kind—but, all enough to poison any place in the world.
