OFFICIAL DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, June 6, 1864—7 a. m.—Major General Dix. New York: We have dispatches from Gen. Grant's headquarters down to six o'clock last evening, which state that there had been no fighting during the day.

The enemy made an attack Saturday night upon Hancock, Wright, and Smith, but were everywhere repulsed. Hancock's lines are brought within forty yards of the rebel works.

The rebels were very busy Saturday constructing entrenchments on the west side of the Chickahominy, at Bottom's Bridge, and towards evening threw a party across to the east side.

A dispatch from General Sherman, dated yesterday afternoon, June 5, half past three o'clock, at Altoona Creek, states that "the enemy, discovering us moving round his right flank, abandoned his position last night, and marched off. McPherson is moving to-day for Aekworth, Thomas on the direct Marietta road, and Schofield on his right.

It has been raining hard for three days, and the roads are heavy. An examination of the enemy's abandoned line of works here show an immense line of works, which I have turned with less loss to ourselves than we have inflicted upon them." The army supplies of forage and provisions are ample.

EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

Large numbers of wounded continue to arrive in Washington and this place from the White House.

The resignation of Major General Fremont has been tendered President Lincoln and accepted.

A regular mail line has been established between Washington and the White House, a boat leaving Washington every morning.
