Dr. and Mrs. John Woodfolk Burke, of Washington, are now in Richmond, where they are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson, on West Franklin Street. Dr. and Mrs. Burke had but recently returned from their wedding trip, and expect to spend the Christmas season in this city.

Mr. William L. Royall, who has been in New York City visiting friends for the past month, will go to Trenton, N. J., this week to spend the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Baker G. Hamill at their home in that place. Miss Emily Royall is visiting Miss Caroline Preston here for a few days before joining her mother in Trenton, and Miss Anne Royall, who is also the guest of friends in Richmond, will accompany her sister to Trenton. Archer-Galbraith. The marriage of Miss Mary Bowles Galbraith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wiley Galbraith, of Baltimore, and Archibald Waltham Archer, of New York, took place Wednesday at 12 o'clock at the First Presbyterian Church, in Baltimore. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large and fashionable assemblage by the Rev. Alfred H. Barr, D. D.

The church was banked with palms and a special musical program was heard during the seating of the guests. The nuptials were Charles G. Nichols, Jr., Lucius K. Henry, Sherborne Presscott and James E. W. Archer, all of New York. William Anderson, of Roland Park, and Benjamin Ashton, of Bedford, Pa., were paces and were Eton suits with boutonniere of waxed daisies.

Miss Elizabeth Lloyd Lowndes, of Cumberland, was the maid of honor. She wore a gown of pink satin brocade, combined with champagne, and trimmed with bands of brown fur, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bride entered the church with her father, by whom she was given away at the chancel, where she was met by the bridegroom, attended by his best man, Aubrey B. Vibbert, of New York. She wore a gown of white satin trimmed with duchess and pointed lace and a tulle veil with pointed lace border. Her bouquet was of lilies of the valley and white orchids.

A breakfast followed at the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Galbraith, at the Preston, after which Mr. and Mrs. Archer left for a wedding journey. On their return they will live at 45 East Seventh-seventh Street, New York.

Mr. Archer is a cousin of William A. Archer, of this city, and formerly made his home in Richmond, where he has a great many friends and relatives.

Engagement Announced. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Peters, of 1101 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Hope Sonnyham Peters, to C. S. Ashby Henry, son of Major and Mrs. Robert Randolph Henry, of Virginia. Miss Peters was introduced a couple of seasons ago. She is a sister of Miss Edith Peters.

The announcement is of much interest to society here, where the groom-elect is widely and prominently regarded.

German To-Night. The most of most interest to the younger members of society here for this evening will be the opening dance of the Bachelors' Cotillion Club, which takes place to-night at 9 o'clock. In the new ballroom of the Richmond Hotel the dance will be a very elaborate affair, and a great many out-of-town guests will be present. Patronesses for the dance this evening are Mrs. H. Carter Scott, Mrs. E. Aubrey Young, Mrs. Fred Pleasant and Mrs. Henry Landon Cabell. A circular letter has been issued by the board of governors of the club to all members, stating that the turkey trot and other such dances will not be allowed at the Bachelors' Cotillion Club. These dances have received the ban of all the most exclusive dancing parties of fashionable society in Richmond, and the fact that one dances them places the dancer in an enviable position at such places where the edict has gone out against them.

Bowers, pastor of Salem Lutheran Church, Catonsville.

Owing to the illness of the bride's father, the ceremony was a quiet one, and was witnessed by only the immediate families.

The bride entered the parlor with her brother-in-law, Mr. Gieske, by whom she was given away. She wore a beautiful traveling gown with black face and carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. Dr. Hugh Brent, brother of the groom, was best man.

SIR WILLIAM YOUNG NOW IN THIS COUNTRY

Visiting in New York Before Undertaking Tour of United States and Canada.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY. SIR WILLIAM LAWRENCE YOUNG, who arrived in New York on Saturday last from England and who is staying at the Mitz-Carlton for a short time before undertaking a tour through the United States and Canada, should not be confounded with Sir William Muston Young, who has not only figured in the course of bankruptcies, but who also has suffered a term of imprisonment. Sir William Lawrence Young, who is married to a member of the ancient Catholic house of Petre, of which the younger half-American Lord Petre is the chief, is about fifty years of age and represents the Youngs of Leny, whose ancestor came from France as chamberlain to Mary Queen of Scots on her return to her native Britain in 1561, and received from her royal mistress a grant of the Manor of Leny. Naturally staunch supporters of the Stuarts, the head of the family espoused their cause in 1715, and selling his estates in Scotland, settled in the West Indies, where he practiced as a physician and prospered. His son, who became Viscount of Leny, created a baronet by George III, not long after his accession to the throne.

Subsequently the Youngs of Leny moved to England and owned Marlow Park, in Berkshire. But the place passed out of their possession, and Sir William Lawrence Young, who is the eighth baronet of his line, has no country seat, but owns a town house in Lower Seymour Street, London. He has five children, and the next heir to his baronetcy is his younger brother, Charles Young, M. V. O., who is councillor of the diplomatic service, stationed at Athens, and where he has married the daughter of his chief, Sir Francis Elliot, the British minister plenipotentiary to Greece. There is another Young, George by name, also in the diplomatic service, and who was attached for several years to the British embassy at Washington. He is the son of Sir George Young, of Formosa, who is in no sense of the world related to the Youngs of Leny. For whereas the latter are of Scotch and W. Indian origin, the Youngs of Formosa hail originally from Dorsetshire and were lords of the manor in that county when Sir Francis Drake set sail for the New World, near four hundred years ago. Their baronetcy is a creation of George IV, when regent, and the present Sir Samuel Young, having been a distinguished member of the Indian Civil Service and a son-in-law of Charles Baring, the great banker.

Formosa has no connection with the great island of that name lying midway between the Japanese Archipelago and the Philippines, in the Pacific, whence most of the Atlantic is traversed, but is an extremely picturesque island in the middle of the Thames, just below Cookham, and nearly opposite Waldorf Astor's magnificent country seat of Cliveden. Formosa has been in the possession of the Forseth family for some two hundred years, the first of whom settled in the island being Admiral Sir George Young, who played a notable role in the taking of Louisbourg, of Quebec and of Havana. Sir George Young is a great-grandson of the admiral and on several occasions visited this country and Canada when his son was attached to the British embassy at Washington. Sir George is one of the survivors of a memorable Alpine tragedy, which took place in 1856. With his two brothers, Albert, now Rural Dean of Kingston-on-the-Thames, and Samuel, he managed to make the ascent of Mont Blanc without guides. Being clever mountaineers they reached the top in safety and were on their way down when Albert fell and dragged his two brothers, who were tied to him, down a terrible slope of snow. Sir George and Albert escaped with relatively few injuries, but Samuel's neck was broken. The accident had been witnessed from Chamounix, by means of telescopes, and a relief party, consisting of experienced guides, was immediately dispatched. It was overtaken by a dense fog, followed by a blinding snowstorm, and it was only with the utmost difficulty that its members reached the surviving brothers, who had been reduced to the last stage of exhaustion, and brought them, as well as the dead body of Samuel, down to Chamounix.

Near half a century has elapsed since then, but it is doubtful whether Sir George, who has had a most distinguished career as Chief Royal Charity Commissioner and in connection with other royal commissions, both at home and abroad, has ever forgotten this memorable adventure, nor his own death on that occasion. He is a poet of no mean order, published a number of volumes of verse, his gifts in that direction probably having come to him through his mother, who was a sister of Winthrop Mackworth Praed, the poet, and he may be said to have transmitted his tastes to at least one of his sons, Geoffrey Winthrop Young, now a master at Eton, having won the Chancellor's Medal at Cambridge University for English verse.

King George, in reviving in favor of Francis Money-Coutts the ancient Barony of Latimer, created by King Edward I in 1299 and which has been in abeyance since 1559, gives him, in fact, precedence over all barons whose dignities have been bestowed since that last of England's Crusader Kings. That is to say, the new Lord Latimer is accorded the "peer" of all barons whose dignities have been created since the year 1296—namely, in more than six centuries. It is just precisely this question of precedence which renders the action of the sovereign in calling out of abeyance peerages which have been dormant for hundreds of years, so unpopular among the hereditary legislators of Great Britain. The barons of England would not object in the slightest degree to the King's bestowal of a new peerage upon Francis Money-Coutts. But to outrank all of those nobles three or four, among their successors.

The new Lord Latimer, whose claim to the barony was reported upon favorably by the Committee of Privileges of the House of Lords last summer, is the hated nephew and principal heir of the late Baroness Harcourt-Coutts, through whom he is the dominant shareholder and principal director of the Bank of America here. George V., like Edward VII, and Queen Victoria before him, keeps his money. If Lord Latimer was disliked by his aunt, who left away from him every vestige of property in calling out of abeyance the peerage that she could, it was owing to her quarrel with his mother, the late Mrs. Money-Coutts. The two sisters got on very well together until Lady

ANOTHER ARREST IN MURDER CASE

Hargrove, a negro, was placed under arrest by Sergeant Cliechester and Sheriff Waller, on suspicion of being connected with the crime, and his premises was searched. After being closely questioned by Commonwealth's Attorney T. Stokely Coleman, Hargrove was placed in jail here. It was stated that some damaging evidence was found in the search of his house, but the officers would not disclose what it was. George Scott, another negro, is already in jail charged with the murder. Miller, another negro, is being held as an important witness. Scott and Hargrove will be given a preliminary hearing at Spotsylvania Courthouse in a few days. The officers are still diligently at work searching for additional evidence.

DELIGHTFUL HOME TALENT PRODUCTION IN GOLDSBORO

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) Goldsboro, N. C., December 19.—Tuesday night at the Messenger Opera House the Goldsboro Choral Society presented Gail's famous "Holy City," for the benefit of the new Goldsboro Hospital. It was by far the best home talent performance ever presented here. The chorus was composed of fifty voices and the work showed the most careful and intelligent training. Miss MacDonald, as soprano soloist, delighted the audience with her sweet voice and excellent interpretation of her selections, and was repeatedly encored. Mr. Arment, as bass soloist, and Mrs. Hitzell and Mrs. Zealey, as alto, and Mr. Winstead, as tenor, in their parts were all that could be desired. The work of the orchestra and chorus was directed by Professor J. W. Thompson, and the success of all was due in a great part to his excellent work.
