REASON ENOUGH

When we sell a man a used car we are naturally hoping that some day he will come back and buy a new car. Honesty aside, that alone seems reason enough for selling him a GOOD Used Car at a fair price.

Oldsmobile

Continued from page one. that deservedly is increasing a harm among the responsible citizens of the country.

"If every driver knew just what the other fellow was going to do there would be far fewer accidents. But he does not. If, however there was a codification of simple regulations that were the same throughout the nation there would be no excuse for a driver not doing the right thing at the right time, nor would he be in doubt as to what the other fellow was going to do.

"To obtain the unanimous adoption of a set of traffic regulations by every municipality in the United States should not be difficult. There need only be applied to this problem the fundamentals upon which the representative form of government is predicated.

"To accomplish this desired result the most constructive step would be to interest some national organization in the plan and have it use its influence to get the governors of all states to call traffic conferences. These would be attended by representative of every municipality in the state, the representatives to be selected by the municipal governing body. It would be economical and advisable for the smaller villages and towns to give a proxy to the representative of the nearest large city who, in all probability, would be a trained traffic expert.

"These 48 state councils would be called upon to draft skeleton traffic codes which would represent the ideas of the states at large. One representative would be selected by each of the 48 state councils as a member of the national traffic commission. This national commission would draft a simple but comprehensive traffic plan based on the 48 skeleton out-lines presented by the representatives. This master plan would be presented to the municipalities by their selected representatives for enactment into law. Pressure of public opinion undoubtedly would be sufficient to insure the adoption of this master plan without change.

HOME TOWNLETS

Advertising is the oil that lubricates the machinery of business.

Jase, says the dog is mankind's best friend except when mankind is trying to sleep on main street.

Clintwood would be better off if all people were as ambitious in preventing fires as they are in getting to them.

When a man dies, glowing obituaries are written about him. But when a town dies, nobody wants to even think about it. The difference is that a town is not supposed to die.
