FISH SUFFERING FROM DROUGHT

Out in Oregon They Brush Dust From Their Eyes With Tails. W. G. Young Tells of Many Interesting Things.

Portland, Oregon, Aug. 28. It has been long since I wrote you last, that I am wondering where I am at, and now, I frequently ask myself the question that Noah is said to have asked the madam when he said, "swallow me up, King." However, it is beginning to come to me where I was at. The war was going on and my thoughts were all wrapped up in pulling for the success of the Allies, a speedy end of the war, and the safe return of my son who was over there; and I reckon I had a pretty good line on it, as the war ended, most people expected, and Archie came back a no. 1 in just a few days of a year from the time he left, and once again old Dad was happy. I think he must have had some experience, though he is loath to speak of it. He was in the 65th Coast Artillery corps, heavy artillery, and attached to the 1st Army, and I quote a paragraph from the Portland Telegram of Dec. 24, 1918. "The regiment was in the thick of the fighting for 12 weeks prior to the signing of the armistice, taking part in five major actions. Three times the 65th was cited for good work and firing, and established a record for moving the big guns. The company entered from Bourgois, France, participated in the big offensive at St. Mihiel. Later they were transferred to the Argonne forest, where they were in the midst of terrific fighting. At Verdun they had the distinction to be the first foreign troops to enter the old town, and they fought side by side with the famous 17th French Army under command of General Gourard. They also had the distinction of having (rare) the first to reach France than any other U. S. soldiers, going from here to San Francisco by rail, and from there to the port of embarkation at New York via the Panama Canal route."

Achie was discharged at Camp Lewis, and came home that afternoon, looking like a walking curiosity shop, laden down with souvenirs among them his own gas mask, and helmet, standing in the mud of Verdun. I was made happy again, as I have been basking in the smiles of another little grandson who has a good honest Irish face on him, and a sweet disposition like his grandfathers. He is six months old, has put in solid time growing, and if he lives I will gamble on his having no better sense than to make a 100 per cent good American man, who will be ready to answer his country's call. But what is the use, for we are not going to have any more wars. The Dove of Peace will see to that.

There are many things that come to mind that I could write about, though they might not prove interesting, but the H. C. of L. is the one thing that is hitting me, directly under the belt. When I go every day to the grocery around the corner with my market basket, I feel like I was going to a funeral. When I come out, look at what I got, and what it cost, I say damn, then when I look at either one of the big daily papers, and see how gingerly they treat the subject of grafting, and profiteering for fear of touching the tenderfeeling of some nation, who will be whistled there may be some cases, and it is very wrong to do so, yet, the corrections, of such wits if there be any, during the reconstruction period, should be dealt with in a very sensible and conservative way, lest the economic and business conditions of the whole country be knocked into pi; and then they mildly hint that the high cost of labor, in printing the paper, then I say "Oh, hell." Now, do not think that I mean to be profane, for I do not. It is just my way of expressing my feelings and disgust. Billy Sunday says more things in the pulpit than I do, but Billy has high license to swear, and I haven't. I noticed in the market quotations the other day that the price of rope had come down two cents per pound, and I felt like singing, "Come thou fount of every blessing," it made me feel so good to think the price of something had tumbled. I hope it will get so cheap that honest folks can afford to put it to the use they did in the pioneer days, hanging rogues, when a man floated in the air for stealing a ten or twenty dollar "Gayuse," but now when he is an honest citizen, tender age under 21, he can steal anything from a tin Elizabeth to a four thousand dollar automobile, and if he is of respectable parentage, as many of them are, out of respect to the honored parents he is paroled to them during good behavior, or turned over to the juvenile court. If he happens to spring from the common herd and then they mildly hint that the sheriff for a short term, arrest him. Now this may appear to be overdrawn but if it is a lie the papers told it first.

The Congressional Spruce Division Committee. The Congressional Spruce Division committee is in session and what it is bringing to light makes interesting reading in a way, and is being published and given to the public. And these facts were well known here long ago, the war was going on, and they had to be whispered only at "low breath," to have spoken them aloud would have been Bolshevism, and treason. Whilst the spruce division was short on getting out airplane spruce for Uncle Sam, it developed a heretofore unknown hero, Col. Bruce P. Disque, who was violently opposed to going to France to fight, but Huns—sought the higher-ups and pleaded for a soft job in a soft place and he got it. Without any business knowledge or experience and not knowing a spruce from a pine or fir tree, as was testified to, he was put at the head of the spruce division, and came out a full fledged General and was awarded a Distinguished Service Medal and he deserves it. He distinguished himself by getting away with more of Uncle Sam's money, and giving less for it, than most any other man could or would have done. But what was Uncle Sam's loss was private interests gain. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad got thirty-five miles of its missing link built, at over a million dollars a mile, a big saw mill at each end of the line adjoining large tracts of privately owned timber was built at a cost of one million dollars each, and not a single spruce log hauled over the road, or cut at either of the mills. Italian were given five dollars per day and soldiers shoveling dirt three dollars and twenty cents, when after deductions were made had nothing left, as was proven by checks exhibited before the committee. One soldier showed one check for sixty-five cents for two and a half days work and another check for seven cents for one hundred and twelve hours work. The food given them and the conditions in the camps was both rotten and unbearable. This is all sworn testimony. He let contracts to big contracting concerns under what is called the "cost-plus" system. Now, I had the "cost-plus" system explained to me, and being a natural homebody was not rightly understand it, but my understanding of the definition of plus is that it means more, so I figure that it meant that the contractors were to get actual cost and just as much more as they could grab and steal. Would like to know if I am right. Please keep up on this investigation and see the result.

Ole Hanson. I must tell you a little about Ole Hanson, Seattle's fighting mayor. (I know you have heard of him and can tell by the rattle of his name that he is a good one), the "Cincinnatus of the West," "the man of the hour," who saved the country from Bolshevism. Well, before Ole was elected Mayor he was considered a pretty good comedian. There was a three cornered race. Ole played for the labor vote, got it and was elected. Then the H. C. of L. began to go up so high that labor said it could not make buckle and tongue meet on expenses, and asked for higher wages to meet the raise. Of course this brought a little trouble, and he drew the guns and the crowd and he flew away with him. I think he went to Washington, D. C. and since he has got back, is found to be highly inflated. The Mayor's salary is too small for him now, he has actually resigned, so today's papers announce. He was in Portland not long since, and confided to friends that he was "not full of monish but wanted more monish," and was going to lecture. I suppose the subject will be "How I saved the nation." When asked about the Presidency, he modestly said he did not contemplate being a candidate, but some people do think that if the nomination was tendered on a silver platter, that he might be induced to accept.

Oregon The Driest. I am going to make a statement that may sound fishy, but nevertheless is true, and that is that Oregon, which has always had the reputation of being about the wettest state in the Union, is now the driest. It is as dry as a powder horn, bone dry, dry to the California State line. I heard that some sections the fish were using their eyes to brush the dust out of their eyes, but I do not vouch for the truthfulness of this but am giving it to you as I heard it. In some sections there has been no rain since last May or April; the pastures are burnt up and stock is suffering greatly for food and water. The forest fires are greater in number than for many a year, and the loss has been great. It looks as though they start from spontaneous combustion. The snow fall last winter in the Coast Range, Cascades and other mountains was far below normal and has greatly lessened the usual amount in the rivers, and streams for irrigation. Portland's water supply is at a very low ebb and people are urged to conserve all water. Bull Run lake at the base of Mt. Hood, fed by the mountain snow, where the city gets its supply is failing to give the usual amount. Yesterday it clouded up and we hope for rain soon. Before closing I cannot refrain from expressing my deep regret over the passing of so many of my old friends in Tazewell. They are gone but I did not say they were dead. There is no death, what seems so is transition.

"Cold in the dust the perished hearth may lie
But that which it warmed once can never die."
When I read J. A. L.'s accounts of his rambles over the country, oh, but don't I wish I could have been with him. I know there must be a wonderful change, since the building of the good roads and one that I could hardly realize. I see Jim Kelly and family are there from Dakota. He was here to see me just about two years ago, and believe me, the sight of him did look good to me. I wish he would come again.
I will close with best wishes to everybody from

Dog Owners—Take Notice. Mr. W. H. Phillips, Game Warden of No. 736, warns dog owners to get tags for their dogs. He says he is looking after the tagless dogs.
Better get rid of the dog if possible, and give his feed to the pigs.

Baker-Kinzer. George Martin Baker, son of Alfred M. Baker, of LaFollette, Tennessee, and Miss Ada Gray, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kinzer, of Abbe's Valley, were married here on last Saturday morning, at the Christian church parsonage, by Rev. W. S. Bullard.

News of Gratton. Roy Jones and family expect to leave for Nebraska the 1st of October to live. He has a brother there, all are doing fine.
Mrs. W. D. Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lefell were in town shopping this week. Mr. and Mrs. Lefell left for Huntington, W. V., Thursday morning, where they will make their future home.
R. N. Jones left for W. Va., with a truck load of pigs to sell.
Mrs. Benton Lefell visited her mother in Graham.
Miss Mary Belchard has returned from a two month visit to Maryland.
Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Lefell, and Mrs. Jones spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. G. S. Gildersleeve.

Bullard-Ward. The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Ward to Mr. Ralph Bullard at Tazewell, Virginia, announced several weeks ago at a delightful breakfast party given by Miss Mayola Gillespie to a circle of the bride's friends, was celebrated at 10:00 a. m., Aug. 30, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Ms. Jeff Ward, on Pine Street.

Simple and divested of mere form, the wedding was a beautiful one. Mrs. A. S. Higginbotham, the favorite soloist of Tazewell, sang "All for you and I" and "Dawning" with piano accompaniment by Mrs. A. G. Russell. Miss Mary Hayter, a cousin of the bride was maid of honor. The four bridesmaids were, the Misses Nell Bailor, Grace Long, Ruth Davis and Marjorie Bullard, dressed in white and bearing flowers. The groom came with his brother Chester Bullard, followed by the bride leaning upon the arm of her father. In a becoming white gown of Georgette crepe, she radiated a natural physical beauty illuminated by sincerity, truth and beauty of character. The groom stood in proud possession of his treasure won.

The celebratory, or officiating ministers were Rev. W. W. Arrowood, the bride's pastor, and Rev. W. S. Bullard, the father of the groom. The parts of the solemn service assigned to the former were the invocation and the Kiss of Communion. The latter received the mutual vows and pledged truth of the contracting parties and concluded with prayer and benediction. The ceremony was a solemn and fitting one.

The congratulations and felicitations of a large circle of friends assembled were most hearty and sincere for every one rejoiced in this true love match. The presents were very many and some of them costly and in the aggregate made up quite a marriage dower. A few near friends motored to Bluefield with the bride and groom who took the train for New York City where they will make their home. Mr. Bullard is an electrical engineer and for several years has had a good position with the United Electric Light and Power Company of that city. A large circle of friends wish Mr. and Mrs. Bullard all joy.

MANY CHANGES AS TIME FLIES

As Years Increase We Forget About Customs and Seasons That Prevalled When We Were Boys on the Farm.

"Times ain't like they used to be," said the old man, who sat musing and smoking on his front porch. "In what ways and how?" he was asked. "Well," he said, as he knocked the ashes from his pipe on the toe of his shoe. "Well," he went on, "take the seasons, for instance. When I was a boy we used to have winters that was winters. I have had my mill pond freeze over for weeks at a time with ice thick enough to hold up a loaded 4 horse wagon. We could go to fill all the ice-houses in the neighborhood in them days. You can't see these days. And such snows as we had when I was a boy, was a plumb sight. It used to be that the ground would be covered with snow nearly all winter. I remember when we had to shovel snow waist deep to make a path to the barn and the spring."

"And, then, take drinking. Times days rabbit hunting and sliding on the snow. Now, as last winter for instance, there wasn't snow enough to track a rabbit in. We always had snow for Christmas, and could sleigh and we went to the post office, town and church, and to mill, in sleighs. But not these late years. I ain't seen a sleigh, nor heard a sleigh bell for twenty of more years."

"And, then, take rinking. Times we had a good position with the United Electric Light and Power Company of that city. A large circle of friends wish Mr. and Mrs. Bullard all joy."

I hope every class will make report in full on all finances, and that every official member will be present.

Resolutions Adopted by the W. C. T. U. at Cedar Bluff, Aug. 27, 1919.

RESOLVED: 1st. That we the committee on resolutions extend to the Cedar Bluff Union our hearty thanks for the delicious luncheon served, the automobiles to meet the delegates, the beautiful floral decorations and the hearty welcome extended to visitors and delegates.

2nd: That we believe the party who buys illegal whiskey is as guilty as the one who sells and should be punished the same, and for that reason we recommended that a bill to that effect be introduced at the next session of the Legislature.

3rd: That we heartily commend the effort made by the Commonwealth's Attorney in prosecuting those who have been found guilty of breaking the prohibition law. And we ask the cooperation and help of all law-abiding Christian people in stamping out this illegal traffic in whiskey.

4th: That a vote of thanks be extended to the Committee, Mrs. Mose Hinkins and Mrs. J. A. Leslie, for their work in getting up the Memorial for the boys who lost their lives in their country's service. Also, that a vote of thanks be extended to Mr. W. E. Peteler-Fagan to Give Joint Recital in Tazewell.

Musical folks will rejoice in the news that Claire Lillian Peteler, the well known soprano and Sibyl Sanderson Fagan, whistler, are scheduled to appear in a concert at the New Theatre tonight. This joint recital will be a special musical treat for the residents of Tazewell, combining as it does two interesting features in one. Miss Peteler flashed upon the musical horizon in the Spring of 1917, with a wonderfully successful debut at the New York Mozart Society. She began the study of the piano when she was seven years old, and the next year her voice was heard in a grand opera singer, who described the quality as that of "Tears in the Voice." That settled Miss Peteler's career immediately and she set to work with a will to study all the many things a successful singer must know. She went abroad and studied voice and languages in Paris, Germany and in Florence. When she returned to this country she began her public career singing in churches and doing club and solo work. She was the soloist for the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in New York.

Miss Fagan, on the other hand, is strictly American product. She, too, began her artistic career when a tot, the girl. Most children can whistle, but it wasn't until a professional whistler visited her home in Springfield, Ohio, that Miss Fagan discovered she could whistle better than others. So she began to study breathing, so important in whistling as in singing. She studied the piano too and claims that this developed her artistic ideals so that she determined to make her gift for whistling a real art and not just an amusing novelty.

Miss Fagan uses two fingers when whistling and on each is a callous spot just below the first joint, where she bites them, "lightly for the notes, and twice as hard for the thrills," as she puts it. Miss Fagan says that using her fingers this way is the only way she ever whistles. She claims that it prevents her lips from getting tired. Certain it is, that she can whistle longer and with greater volume of smoothness than anyone else. She says she can whistle better and easier during the second half of a number than during the first half.

The combination of Miss Peteler's voice and Miss Fagan's whistling is a very happy one and musical lovers of Tazewell are particularly favored in being able to hear these two remarkable artists.

This was the first air-plane to fly here, and the people of the town were highly interested. The machine came, it is supposed from the Bluefield Fair, where daily exhibitions have been given.

Never Saw The Like Before.
