CONSTIPATION

"I have gone 14 days at a time without a movement of the bowels, not being able to move them except by using hot water injections. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in the terrible condition during that time I did everything I could of but never found any relief, such was my case until I began using CASCARETS. I now have from one to three passages a day. And if I was sick I would give CASCARETS for each movement. It is such a relief."

CLOVER LAY FOR POULTRY.

Many successful poultry raisers feed large amounts of clover hay during the winter, when succulent food is scant. The usual preparation is to cut very fine and at night sprinkle well with boiling water. By morning it will be soft and ready for feeding, and will be highly relished by fowls. It is a highly nitrogenous food and can be fed with advantage every other day. Some poultrymen mix cornmeal with it; this practice gives a complete food, the corn furnishing the carbohydrates or fat producing element of the food.—Journal of Aerial Culture.

PIGEONS ON THE FARM.

How to Build a House and Yard Suited to Their Requirements in Every Detail.

Among the pets that make life especially attractive in the country stand first and foremost the dainty pigeons. As well try to "paint the lily" as to attempt to fashion a more bewitching creature than it is to be seen in this combination of grace and feathers. Why the pigeons are not more commonly seen about the country places is hard to understand, for as a source of ornament they are preeminent and as a source of delightful companionship they are unequalled. Their superb airs and grace, the bewitching posturing combined with great beauty of form—all unite to make these little friends most desirable accompaniments to rural life.

Where pigeons are kept it is too often the practice to house them in some low loft under the eaves, where it is inconvenient to visit them and where the birds often suffer neglect. If possible it is better to have quarters upon the ground floor and preferably in a separate building. The pigeon house may well be made an ornament to the place. With this idea in view the accompanying illustration is given.

This represents a small and inexpensive house built in attractive lines and thoroughly suited to the purpose for which it is intended. A small hallway runs through the center, giving access to a commodious room on each side. A "flight" on either end of the house opens out from these two lofts. Such a little house, stained and covered with vines, will make a very attractive addition to any country place, and will do much toward getting the children in love with country life and interested in the companionship of animals. Such a result will prove beneficial in all ways, and the influence will remain a lasting impression through life.—American Agriculturist.

BASSWOOD AND BEES.

A Beautiful Tree That Furnishes an Abundance of Food for the Honey-Makers.

Beekeepers will find it profitable to plant for and prepare bee pastures, says an exchange. Those who have had either the good fortune to be located where basswood or linden trees are plentiful, or have the patience to await the development of this tree, have found that they furnish an abundance of food for the bee to manufacture into honey. The tree is a beautiful one and may well be planted as an ornament. Small trees can be procured from the forest or from nurseries that handle forest trees, and planted in the fall in some desirable location for a grove. The larger ones are said to thrive better. The blossoms are small, of a light yellow color, and rather pretty. The honey is secreted in the inner side of the thick, fleshy petals. When it is profuse it will sparkle like dewdrops, if a cluster of blossoms is held up to the sunlight. There has been recorded, where basswood trees were abundant, an instance of a single hive storing 43 pounds of honey in three days.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

Leghorns and brahmas do not thrive well together.

If the fowls have bowel disease change the food for a day or two and also change the grit.

Roup is so contagious that on its first appearance the only safe plan is to take away all affected fowls.

Feathers on the legs, large combs and warts and heavy crests do not add anything to the egg production.

When the weather is cold the eggs should be gathered up frequently, or they cannot be depended upon to hatch.

Put an old cock, not over two years, with the laying pullets, and a fully matured, well developed young one with the old hen.

Iron is invigorating, stimulating and assists in guarding the system from disease. A deficiency of it in the system causes weakness.

Do not throw the scraps from the table to the poultry after each meal. Save them up to cook until soft and give them warm for a morning meal. Cook them in milk, if possible.—St. Louis Republic.
