WHEN MOTHER CAME HOME.

Start came in from the baseball game ... Irene will be just between us ...

The Story of Irene.

By Hope Darling.

REALLY, truly coming to live with ...

Mabel and Maudie Brown had just entered the sitting-room of their farmhouse home.

"Irene will be just between us ..."

Just then the baby brother, who was only big enough to talk in cunning broken words, ran in and was delighted at the return of his sisters.

It was a week before Irene came. In this week the little girls were very busy.

Irene reached the town, four miles distant, late in the afternoon.

Mabel flushed a little. Leon came toddling down the path, and Irene dropped everything to hold out her hands to him.

The next morning was clear and warm.

A small youth of some six summers whose father is accustomed to supplement his day of church catechism by Sunday evening readings from the old Bible stories, found theological difficulties presented by the tale of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego.

Alcohol was first produced by Abbaeus, an alchemist, in the eleventh century.

It is a peculiar antic of fate that a woman never marries her ideal.

Across the board she looks at me—My soul responds obediently.

A Delaware farmer recently purchased a horse which had been in the Spanish-American war, and on being clipped several shot were found embedded in its flesh.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

“TICKETS!”

An Unconscious Hero and His Promise to His Old Mother.

The Leadville train was three hours late.

It was just midnight when waiting passengers at Breckinridge heard the welcome “All aboard!”

After a little I proceeded to do it. But a quartette of merry men before me, who had come to the railway on snowshoes, from a remote mine, and had just boarded the train with great bluster and fun.

“I don't smile that way.”

“Have you an agreeable boarding house?”

“Yes, we have; every morning we have a cake walk.”

“That boy of mine,” said the angry father, “is just a natural born fool.”

“Of course,” returned the neighbor, and there was that in his tone that made the father want to climb the fence and go after him.—Chicago Post.

Roses and Thorns.

STRICTLY MODERN.

One of the most painful modes of death is poisoning by carbolic acid.

Two Chicago boys, aged 15, undertook the other day to simulate the Spanish heroes of the bull ring, and with disastrous results.

In Lincoln county, Kan., Michael Garrity, a well-to-do farmer, decided all his property to his wife on a recent Wednesday.

“It seems strange,” says a sensible New York woman, “that more women who are forced to earn their own living do not open lunch rooms of some kind.

A story goes that a church in Warburg, Mo., was sadly in need of general repairs, and a meeting was being held in it with a view of raising funds for that purpose.

Horror of Homicide. “This,” said Tufford Knutt, as he began his meal on the back porch with the quarter section of pie the good woman of the house had handed out, “is the enteric wedge.”—Chicago Tribune.

A Welcome Proposition. Mamma—Just look at the front of your new coat! I don't think it is the slightest use to try to keep you clean!

A Bad Purchase. Bobbie—Pa, where did little brother come from? Father—I bought him, my boy. Bobbie—Pa, you got swindled.—Town Topics.

Evidently Not. “They say Nibley saves just half of his income every year.” “How does that happen? Have they no neighbors that Nibley's wife doesn't outshine?”—Chicago Daily News.
